TURKEY READY TO STRIKE BULGARIA

Bulgarian Refusal to Pay Indemnity Moves the Porte to Prepare for Armed Conflict.

BOTH NATIONS READY TO RUSH TO ARMS

Paris, Oct. 17.—The French government has just received official confirmation of previous reports of the mobiliation by Turkey of the Anatolian army corps. This is regarded in official circles as Turkey's answer to Bulgaria's refusal to accord compensation for the Oriental railroad and it is believed to make war practically inevitable. It is predicted that Bulgaria immediately will begin to push troops across the Turkish frontier and gain an advantage before Turkey can begin general mobilization.

SUMMARY OF CONDITIONS.

Paris, Oct. 17.—The situation between Bulgaria and Turkey is regarded here today as distinctly more grave, owing to the intransigeant attitude of the former and the latter's preparations for war. The report that Bulgaria rejected the offer made by Germany and Austria-Hungary to recognize her independence if she settled the dispute over the Oriental railroad directly with Turkey is officially confirmed. The French government in response to the Turkish circular sent out yesterday calling the attention of the powers to Bulgaria's alleged warlike preparations has directed her minister at Sofia to renew his counsels for peace and prudence.

Important developments are not expected to result from the visit to Paris of M. Iswolsky, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, who arrived here last evening from London.

With the idea of preparing for possible future contingencies and principally for the purpose of consulting with France before proceeding to Berlin on Monday, M. Iswolsky today called on and conferred with President Fallieres, Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pinchon.

M. Iswolsky is suspected of having given out the program for the conference of the powers which was elaborated in London, but he today denied this suggestion and attempted to cast doubt upon the accuracy of the London communication. The London statement, however, has been fully confirmed in official quarters here.

MASSACRES IN ARMENIA.

Berlin, Oct. 17.—There have been frightful massacres in Armenia, according to the Constantinople correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt.

A dispatch from the Turkish capital says:

"Armenians in Wiranschehir have been massacred by Turkish troops. The women and children have been subjected to fearful treatment.

"The troops were sent to Wiranschehir to overawe the mutinous townspeople, two-thirds of whom are Armenians, and they at once began to murder and plunder. They are said to have completely overrun the city."

HAINS BROTHERS TO ANSWER MURDER CHARGE

Men Who Slew William Annis Indicted by Grand Jury at Flushing, L. I.

New York, Oct. 17.—Indictments charging Captain Peter C. Hains, jr., and T. Jenkins Hains with murder in the first degree were handed up by the Queens county grand jury at Flushing, L. I., today.

The indictments are based upon the killing of William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht club in August last.

Although T. Jenkins Hains was held as an accessory to the murder, the indictment charges him, as well as his brother, with being a principal.

Witnesses have testified that T. Jenkins Hains, by the display of a revolver, prevented the spectators from interfering while Captain Hains fired several bullets into the body of his victim. It has not been charged that T. Jenkins Hains fired any of the shots which killed Annis.

The district attorney notified the court that he would arraign the Hains brothers to plead next Tuesday and would ask that their trial be set for November 9th.

The witnesses who testified before the grand jury did not include either Mrs. Annis or Mrs. Hains, the wife of Captain Hains.

Attorney John Eggeman went to Lafayette this afternoon and will bring his family home from that place tonight.

THE WEATHER.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—For Indiana—Fair and warmer tonight; Sunday increasing cloudiness with showers and cooler in afternoon or night.

Illinois—Increasing cloudiness tonight; showers and colder Sunday.

Lower Michigan—Increasing cloudiness tonight with warmer in east portion; Sunday showers and cooler in afternoon or night.

TAFT TRYING FOR A GOAL WAY DOWN IN DIXIE

Visits North Carolina and Hope Springs Afresh in Party Bosom.

Salisbury, N. C., Oct. 17.—Judge William H. Taft today put much courage into the breasts of J. Elwood Cox, banker and manufacturer of High Point and nominee for governor on the republican ticket, and C. F. Toms, of Hendersonville, nominee for lieutenant governor.

"Your visit to North Carolina gives me the firm belief that not only will you carry the state but that the state ticket will be elected," was what Mr. Cox told Mr. Taft today as he and his running mate joined the Taft special.

"We are sure of electing two, and there is a probability of electing one more republican congressman," he added.

In outlining the situation to Mr. Taft, Mr. Cox said that he was nominated unanimously and that he had made a campaign of the state, making business the strict issue.

"The negro question has been eliminated," he added, "by an amendment to the state constitution, which, it is intimated, will limit the negro vote to 5,000 in the state. This was the action of the democrats, who declared they were not disfranchising the negro but enfranchising the whites."

This information caused Judge Taft to add an expression of satisfaction that he had taken his southern swing. He spoke briefly at Statesville and at this place and during the day and evening will address meetings at High Point and Greensboro in this state and at Danville, Va., and Richmond, Va.

TAKES WANDERER HOME.

Deputy Township Trustee Dennis Gorman left at noon today for the west in charge of an aged man named Kratz, who will be returned to the home of his son at Hollywood, Calif. Kratz is addicted to liquor and has been a wanderer for months. His son, John C. Kratz, forwarded funds for his transportation west. The aged man has been an inmate of the county asylum here for some weeks. The son says his father will not remain at home.

PREMIER LAURIER TO RETIRE.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 17.—In a speech delivered last night, Sir Wilfred Laurier, Canada's premier, announced that the present campaign, which ends in a general election October 26, will be his last.

"This is the last fight in which I shall be engaged," he said, with great earnestness.

ANXIETY NOW FELT FOR SAFETY OF YANKTON

Pilot of the Fleet is Not Heard from—Welcomed by Japan's Statesmen.

Tokio, Oct. 17.—The American gunboat Yankton had been neither sighted nor definitely located up to 8 o'clock tonight and there is some uneasiness here and at Yokohama concerning her. She has no wireless telegraphy on board.

The Yankton left Olongapo October 10 for Yokohama, where she is to join the battle ship fleet. She was reported as having been sighted at sea at 8 o'clock in the morning of October 15 and was expected to come into Yokohama harbor some time during the morning of October 16.

The official reception committee, headed by Vice Admiral Saito, who is vice minister of the navy department, will leave tomorrow (the 18th) for Yokohama and the party will assemble aboard the battle ship Mikasa. Upon the arrival of the American battle ships at 9 o'clock in the morning the committee will board the flagship Connecticut and present the address of welcome to Admiral Sperry.

After the exchange of official calls it has been arranged that the American officers shall attend a garden party, followed by a dinner, at which the mayor of Yokohama will be host.

In the evening there will be a ball given in their honor by Kimihira Sufu, prefectural governor of Kanagawa.

The scene in Yokohama on the eve of the fleet's arrival is of the liveliest. The city is crowded with Japanese and foreigners and every house, however poor, is decorated in honor of the Americans with crosses, flags and lanterns. In some instances the display on the more pretentious buildings is little short of magnificent.

The spontaneous enthusiasm of the people is unbounded and unprecedented even on the occasion that followed the close of the war with Russia a few years ago.

The dispatch received from Tokio yesterday recites that the American battle ship fleet encountered a very heavy storm off the north coast of Luzon on the 12th and 13th of October. This heavy weather may have delayed the Yankton.

STATESMEN WELCOME FLEET.

Tokio, Oct. 17.—"The whole people of Japan unite in extending a most warm and sincere welcome to their guests on the American battleship fleet, now approaching the harbor of Yokohama. The visit of these good ships and men to our empire is sincerely regarded as an additional token of the unbroken friendship which has existed between the two nations since the coming to Japan of Commodore Perry in 1852. Such a round-the-world cruise undertaken by the magnificent navy of our friendly neighbor breaks the record in naval annals and it will be watched until its completion with the most intense interest because of its bearing on the naval relations and achievements in the future of all naval powers.

"I hope our friendship and commercial relations with the United States will be more closely cemented by this auspicious event."

The foregoing are the words of welcome to the American battle ship fleet penned by Prince Ito, the foremost man of Japan, today and above all, the statesman who represents the entire Japanese people.

He wrote them carefully with his own hand and affixed his signature in the foreign office today. In this message of welcome the prince undoubtedly voiced the popular sentiment of the people from the highest to the lowest.

Yamataga Is Cordial.

The Associated Press has secured the following signed statement on the coming of the American battle ship fleet from the greatest men living in Japan today. Prince Yamataga says:

"The cruise of this great American fleet, an unprecedented undertaking, affords us an opportunity to evidence our sincere friendship and giving our guests a sincere welcome. The occasion undoubtedly will make it possible for the naval men of Japan to learn from the experiences of their senior colleagues and the visit assuredly will result in further cementing the friendly relations between the two countries. I wel come the American fleet as an evidence of friendship and also a guarantee of the peace of the whole world."

An Ex-Premier's Words.

Marquis Matsukata, ex-premier and minister of finance, wrote:

"Fifty years ago Commodore Perry brought about the opening of our countries. I welcome the American Admiral Sperry brings glad tidings of peace and good will. The friendly relations between America and Japan decorate the pages of the world's history of civilization. My sincere hopes

DEATH ROLL MAY GO OVER TWO SCORE IN MICHIGAN

Reports of the Loss of Life Incomplete—May be Exaggerated.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 17.—Reports of the loss of life from the northern counties of the state which are being swept by forest fires are still incomplete this afternoon and the estimates of the total death list range from twenty-eight to forty-two. Possible duplication of names in altered form from different sources may account for the difference in estimates.

The Journal received reports this afternoon of the deaths of ten persons not reported from any other source. A report from Rogers City told of the cremation of four members of the family of John Sezerski on their farm near Rogers City. Sezerski and his two hired men escaped and have arrived there.

From Cheboygan comes a report of the finding of the bodies of six children.

DETAILS OF HORRORS.

Alpena, Mich., Oct. 17.—With twenty-seven people known to have perished yesterday in Presque Isle county, and with forests fires still raging uncontrolled through the counties of Cheboygan, Presque Isle, Alpena and Aloona, as well as in other scattered districts through northern Michigan, diligent search was begun today to determine the full extent of the holocaust. It may take many days to reveal tragedies that are likely to have ocurred on isolated farms. The death list may not be fully known for a week. It is thought the property loss will run into the millions.

Whole villages have been blotted off the map and logging camps by the dozen have been destroyed with their entire season's output.

Near Turner a flock of nearly 100 sheep were burned alive. In the immediate vicinity of Millersburg alone, the losses are estimated at half a million dollars.

Other districts where bad forest fires are reported are in the neighborhood of Elmira, Gaylord and Johannesburg, in Otsego county; Cadillac in Wexford county; Grayling, in Crawford county, where four million trees planted by the state forestry commission were destroyed; Grawn, in Grand Traverse county and Caseville and Bad Axe, in Huron county.

Upper Peninsula Has Fires.

In the Upper Peninsula threatening forest fires are reported around Sault Ste. Marie, Menominee, Escanaba, Calumet and Houghton. At Koss, near Menominee, 18 homes are reported destroyed with as many more threatened.

Navigation has been practically suspended at the Soo, owing to the dense smoke and the Presque Isle fog station on Lake Huron was abandoned yesterday by Patrick H. Garrity, who was obliged to flee for his life.

BAPTISTS DECLARE THEIR SUPPORT OF OPTION

State Body Resolves to Uphold the New Law—End of Convention.

The Baptist state convention, at the closing afternoon session, went on record in favor of the county local option law and by resolution pledged itself to the maintenance of such law. The resolution as adopted was as follows:

"Be it resolved, That the Baptists of the state of Indiana, in convention assembled, most heartily approve the action of the recent special session of the general assembly in the enactment of a law giving the people of the counties the opportunity to abolish the saloon with its attendant evils, and we pledge ourselves to use our best efforts to continue such law on the statute books of the commonwealth.'

A further resolution for state wide prohibition was presented in favor of a state constitutional amendment being adopted. In support of the report of the committee, Rev. P. H. Foulk, of Bloomington, Ind., representative of the anti-saloon league, stated that he thought the prohibition party had rendered good service, but that this service was no longer required, as the matter of prohibition had been taken up by the greater powers.

Closing of Convention.

The closing service of the convention was held on Friday evening at the First Baptist church, where Rev. W. H. Geistweit, D. D., of Peoria, Ill., the speaker of the evening, was greeted by an audience of several hundred people. Dr. Geistweit used as his subject, "An Improved Sunday School.' In introducing his subject he expressed his conviction that the Sunday school is the failure of the churches of today. The facts must be faced and the efforts made to improve conditions and arrive at increased efficiency in the Sunday school.

"The main function of the Sunday school," said Dr. Geistweit, "is to win boys and girls to the Christian life, and develop in them a Christian character."

Clinton Willson sang "A Clean Heart," and at Dr. Weistweit's suggestion the entire congregation joined in singing the same music to the hymn "Just As I Am," bringing the convention to a close.

AUXILIARY TO ENTERTAIN.

Next Friday evening, October 23, the Ladies' Auxiliary to the O. R. C. will give a card party in the O. R. C. hall on Calhoun street, over App's shoe store. The guests will be the O. R. C. men and the members of the auxiliary ladies' families. The rules of previous entertainments of this kind will prevail at the one next Friday and the ladies and their guests will have a good time.

TWO PERSONS LOSE LIVES IN FIRE AT SHIRLEY

An Indiana Town Suffers Heavy Damage—Twenty-five Buildings Burn.

Knightstown, Ind., Oct. 17.—Twenty-five buildings were destroyed by fire at Shirley, a little town north of here, early this morning. Two persons perished in the flames. Most of the burned places were dwellings.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. M. Pryor, who conducted a restaurant, perished while asleep.

The fire broke out before daylight while most of the people were asleep and spread so rapidly that few had a chance to save their possessions. Many of the people who lost their homes narrowly escaped with their lives.

The fire, the origin of which is a mystery, started either in the building occupied by the Shirley National bank, or in the restaurant adjoining. It was discovered about 3 o'clock and before the flames were controlled it destroyed practically everything in the path of the fire, including three blocks made up of business buildings.

Mr. and Mrs. Pryor occupied apartments on the second floor of one of the burned buildings and their escape was cut off by the fire, which raged so fiercely no one could go to their rescue.

The town was without fire protection, with the exception of a few chemical tanks and was practically at the mercy of the flames.

The town has a population of about 1,000 peo- and sprang up several years ago from the location of factories there. It is located on two divisions of the Big Four, half in Henry county and the other half being in Hancock county.

The value of the burned property is estimated at $50,000 and is only partly covered by insurance.

The Losses.

The following are the losses and insurance:

Woods block, loss $18,000; insurance $10,000.

Martindal block, loss $5,000; insurance $2,500.

B. L. Byrkett, store room, loss $600; insurance $400.

Maud Masterton, millinery store; loss $200; no insurance.

Legg and Gephardt feed store, loss $1,800; insurance $1,500.

Gabilles Restaurant, loss $1,000; insurance $500.

John Laramore, loss on building $500 with $300 insurance and two business rooms, loss $500 with $200 insurance.

Richard Foutz block, loss $1,500, insurance $500; also livery stable, loss $800, no insurance.

Spangler Dry Goods company $4,000 loss, $4,000 insurance.

Harry Bowman, grocery, loss $2,000; insurance $1,000.

Charles R. Shaw, men's furnishings, loss $1,500; insurance $400.

Other losses not yet estimated will bring a total of $150,000.

The total insurance is about $35,000.

MILITARY SCHOOL BURNS.

Institution Near Lincoln, Neb., is Wholly Destroyed.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 17.—The Nebraska Military academy, located three miles west of this city, was destroyed by fire today. The school was established this fall by B. D. Hayward and the building erected for the Western Normal college was equipped for the venture. The fire started in the northwest wing over the kitchen. The loss is estimated at $100,000 with $20,000 insurance.

Sixty-five boys were enrolled and these were taken from the building in safety.

MUST BE MORE REGULAR.

Attendance at Free Night School is Much To Erratic.

Enrollment at the free night public school established by the city school board is now ninety, with an average attendance of sixty, and the session are held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Mr. Fuelber, of the school board, stated today in many cases the attendance is erratic, and that those who desire to avail themselves of the privileges of the school must be more regular in attendance or they would be barred.

COL. GOWDY IS HERE "MERELY TO SEE THE BOYS"

Director General of Watson Campaign Pays Visit to Fort Wayne.

Col. John K. Gowdy, of Rushville, former consul general to Paris, but now director general of the Watson gubernatorial campaign, came to town this morning. This afternoon at the Randall hotel he was in conference with a number of local republican leaders in a discussion of the political situation hereabouts.

"Just here to see the boys; you know I always like to get around and see the boys," was Col. Gowdy's smiling rejoinder to The Sentinel's inquiry as to the purpose of his visit to Fort Wayne. He arrived in the city from Indianapolis and his prospective visit was unknown save to a very few of the local republican leaders. News of his presence quickly spread, however and there were a score or more of local party managers closeted with Mr. Gowdy in his room at the hotel this afternoon. He left at 4 o'clock on his return to his home in Rushville.

Says He is Gratified.

Asked concerning his view of the political situation in Indiana, Col. Gowdy, who has been in supreme command of the Watson campaign since long before the republican state convention last spring, declared himself as highly gratified with the outlook.

"My trip over the state has convinced me," said Col. Gowdy, "that the reaction has set in in earnest Taft will most certainly have a big majority in Indiana, and I want to say that in my judgment Mr. Watson is not only certain of election, but that his plurality will not be so far below that of Mr. Taft, as a good many others have been predicting."

The veteran political wheelhorse declined to make a prediction of the result in figures, and said that he had as yet given out no estimate of majorities, but he was positive in his convictions of the success of both Judge Taft and Mr. Watson. He asserted that his personal pilgrimage over the state had in no wise disturbed him, but that it had in fact increased his confidence. Col. Gowdy's smile and his manner indicated that he is rather enjoying a return to the political game.

"I used to have some little connection with Indiana politics," said the veteran, but most of it was a good many years ago and I am beginning to class myself with the old men now."

Col. Gowdy has been living quietly at his Rushville home since his return from Europe three years ago. "And I'm glad to be at home," said he, "It's the finest place in the world to me."

Seeing Cousin John

An Interesting Episode That Marked the Visit of Hon. John Sharp Williams to Fort Wayne.

By MATILDA HENDERSON WHEELOCK.

The Honorable John Sharp Williams was the recipient of a delightful surprise at the close of his speech Thursday evening at the Princess rink when a little woman, by means of a chair and the reporters' table, clambered to the platform and, grasping the hand of the distinguished speaker, hailed him as "Cousin John." The little lady was Mrs. Mary Williams Yates, who has very recently removed to Fort Wayne from Panther Creek, North Carolina, the old revolutionary home of the Williams family. This old colonial home is famous as one of the historic places of the south, and was considered one of the most beautiful, though at the present time a modern house stands on the site of the old mansion, which was burned in 1885.

Mrs. Yates very naturally desired a visit with her cousin, but with the courtesy which is characteristic of the women of the southland, she did not wish to interfere with the arrangements of the democratic committee, and so, in company with a friend, sought the chairman, Hon. S. B. Fleming, with a view to having him arrange a meeting which should not conflict with the committee's plans. It was Mr. Fleming's busy day, however, and it was by a devious route the two ladies finally located him at the democratic headquarters. Here they were greeted with the Fleming hand-clasp and the Fleming smile (that hand-clasp and that smile are going to win a lot of votes for Steve Fleming), and when the ladies plaintively confessed the difficulties they had encountered in their search for him and had indicated a number of the places they had dodged into and out of in their effort to find him, Mr. Fleming laughingly expressed the hope that they had not been everywhere he'd been that morning. Whereupon the ladies blushed, but declined to incriminate themselves—merely promising, if they had been, not to tell.

And Mr. Fleming won the heart of the little woman from Panther Creek by agreeing that the committee should spare "Cousin John" to her for the desired visit. And he kept his word, a fact which is, I believe, characteristic of Stephen Fleming. He has a sort of habit of keeping his word, so they say. Anyway, he kept it in this case, and on Friday morning brought the Hon. John Sharp Williams to call upon his North Carolina relative. The present scribe was graciously admitted to the interview, and a rare treat it was to one to whom the "Sunny South" with its charming people and its delightful traditions has always made a special appeal.

Not a word of politics at this meeting. Just reminiscences of genial Uncle Nick, and kindly memories of Cousin Melinda; bits of family history concerning Uncle Lewis, the "father of the house of representatives," and for twenty-seven years a distinguished member of that august body; tolerant references to the eccentricities of Governor "Bob" Williams, of Mississippi, and intimate talk of Uncle John and Uncle Joe and Cousin Richmond.

And then the little hostess brought out two yellowed missives penned in 1818, priceless old letters from Lewis and Robert to their father, Col. Joseph Williams, of revolutionary fame. In the one Lewis describes in old-fashioned phraseology the pleasure of a recent visit to relatives and mentions with much solicitude an affliction in the shape of a toothache from which "Sister Rebecca" was suffering, and with much tenderness the "ecstatic joy" this same sister experienced at the visit, in spite of the "excruciating pain" of the toothache. The second letter, from Robert, is an outburst of righteous wrath over the shortcomings of two younger brothers, and a gloomy prophecy of the decline of the family of Williams—from which foreboding it is evident that to the pessimistic Uncle Robert was vouchsafed no prophetic vision whereby to look down the dim vista of the future and to behold therein this illustrious member of that same family who, ninety years later, sat leaning nonchalantly back in a big plush-covered chair reading the doleful prophecy and smiling with quiet pleasure in the quaint epistle.

But "Cousin John's" time was limited, and almost before the letters were finished the committee, represented by Mr. Fleming and Mr. Robinson, came to escort him to the station, where he was to take the train for Richmond, his next appointment. And when for good-bye this splendid "son of the sunny south" stooped and kissed the little cousin from North Carolina the scribe was stirred to bitter envy. She wished he were her Cousin John.

and expectations are that these same relations will go on forever. The present visit is destined to extend a happy influence on the political and economic relations between Japan and America. Consequently I welcome the American fleet with my whole heart."

Marquis Katsura, premier and minister of finance, one of the elder statesmen and a member of the military council of the empire, writes as follows:

"I welcome the American warships with the most profound appreciation of the important results which are expected to follow the coming of this magnificent fleet in such a hearty spirit of good will. The visit will give opportunity to cement the friendly relations already existing between the two countries."

Vice Admiral Baron Aito, minister of marine, writes:

"Words are inadequate to express our delight in welcoming the American battle ship fleet to Japan. The traditional good relations existing between the two nations will be further strengthened by this happy meeting of the two navies. I sincerely hope that the American officers and men will enjoy their sojourn in this country."

What the Great Togo Says.

Admiral Count Togo, chief of the general staff of the navy and hero of the battle of the Sea of Japan, writes:

"I sincerely welcome the visit of this magnificent fleet representing a nation whose friendship with our country is traditional, and I sincerely hope that the fleets of America and Japan may be the happy means of uniting the two nations in eternal bonds whose security shall be guaranteed by the men and ships of both countries. May our friendship, which has lasted so long, continue to grow, and flourish forever."

Lieutenant General Viscount Terauchi, at present minister of war and at one time acting foreign minister, says:

"Admiral Sperry, in command of a fleet of battle ships aggregating more than 200,000 tons, is making the longest voyage ever attempted in naval history and he is very close to our harbor. Such a feat could not be accomplished without perfect training, seamanship and discipline on the part of the men of the admiral's command. It is a marvelous achievement and every true Japanese feels as I do in welcoming the admiral, his ships and his men."

DEATH ROLL MAY GO OVER TWO SCORE IN MICHIGAN.

City were last night reported in grave danger.

At Alpena last night, the common council at a special meeting authorized Mayor McKnight to issue what temporary relief he thought best for the fire sufferers. Provisions and clothing will be sent from Alpena to the scene of the Metz disaster and also to needy victims in Alpena county. Alpena citizens will hold a mass meeting Sunday noon to adopt further measures.

Little Further Damage.

First reports coming in today from the fire swept district in this section of the state did not materially increase the sum total of damages despite the fact that high winds swept over the burning section all night. The villages of Posen and La Roque, which last night were in grave danger, escaped and are today regarded as out of danger, barring a decided change of wind, as most of the slashings and underbrush about them are dead.

Both Long Lake and Wilson townships escaped with few losses, although both were in great danger last night.

Reports are constantly coming in of the destruction of small villages and isolated groups of houses.

Petoskey, on the west side of the state reports that the fire situation in that vicinity is better than last night. Hastings Heights, a summer resort near Conway, is threatened today, as is Riggsville. A cloud of smoke hangs over the Methodist resort at Bay View, but the fire is not yet near enough to cause anxiety.

NO SETTLEMENT LIKELY WITH THE M'BRIDE COMPANY

Would Not Accept Offer Made by City and the Matter is in the Air.

The officials and the McBride Electrical Construction company have been unable to arrive at any settlement of their differences growing out of the building of the municipal lighting plant and have abandoned their conferences with the probability that the matter will be thrashed out in the courts.

The city makes the claim that the work of the company was not done in accordance with the specifications and have rendered a bill for the omissions which they want to deduct from the contract price. On the other hand the company has a bill for about $19,000 in extras which has been presented. Several meetings have been held, and finally the city made an offer which the company would not accept and there the matter rests.

INDIANA FARM HAND HAS SOME NOTIONS OF FARM LIFE

Too Long Hours Make Life in Country Burden—Sound Views.

Washington, Oct. 17.—An Indiana farmhand has written a letter to President Roosevelt about the work which the Country Life Commission is carrying on. The president has turned the letter over to the Country Life Commission and the commission has asked the farmhand to write some more.

"I have been a farmhand just long enough," says the president's correspondent, "to learn the cause of so many sons and daughters and well-meaning, reliable farmhands leaving the beautiful farm and country and going to the city. A lack of order and system on the farm and too long hours for a day is what is driving the best minds from the farm to the city and shop. What can we expect of a hand, or the farmer's wife and her posterity, in the way of intellectual development when they get out of their beds at 3:30 in the morning and work from that time until 8 or 9 p. m.? And no attention paid to the sanitary conditions of the home, and necessary conveniences on the farm for doing the farm work with the least labor and time."

This man has given the Country Life Commission some very interesting first-hand information about rural conditions and recommendations based on a long experience in farm work and farm life. He has worked for all kinds of farmers, good and bad, he says, and he has always had his eyes open to detect the causes of their success or failure. He has drawn his own conclusions and sets them forth in downright, straightforward fashion. Education pays in farming, he says. The farmer who plans out his work and carries it through in a systematic, business-like manner, just as the city man does, will be able to shorten the hours of labor. "So many farmers measure everything on the farm from the standpoint of muscle," he continues, "and are extreme in some things and slack in others. I decided several years ago that life is too short to work for Peter Tumbledown farmers."

What Farmhand Says.

"Now, Mr. President," he writes, "you can take this for what it is worth. I have not given you half of my experience." The Country Life Commission has written him that his suggestions are so useful that they hope he will send more.

"Compel the farmer to be a business man," he says. "Go into the homes of some of the farmers and the so-called farmers and ascertain how they live, and learn of their methods of doing the business in which they are engaged. And you will be surprised what a variety you will find. Ascertain what they read, and what stress they put on the literature that comes into their homes (if any comes) bearing on the business they are engaged in. See what per cent study their business.

"Give me the educated farmer as a boss and the educated farmhand as a hand. When I come in contact with a hand or farmer that studies his business I find him advancing, and it is a pleasure to work for such men.

"The majority of the farmers are eight-hour men, that is, eight hours in the forenoon and eight in the afternoon. Eight or ten hours on the farm cannot well be adapted in all cases, but it need not be from fourteen to sixteen hours. If the family arise every morning at 5 o'clock and the wife and daughters attend to the household duties, and the farmhands and sons attend to the chores and go to the field at 7 o'clock and work until 11 or 11:30 and go to the field again at 1 and keep at it until 6 o'clock, and go to the house and eat the supper, and then do the evening chores, they have done a farm day's work. Regular hours for work, and regular hours for meals, and regular hours for sleep, and regular hours for rest and recreation, with plenty of standard papers and books, including the best agricultural papers and books, and a full faith in God, and good grub is wanted.

Should Rise Early Sunday.

"The family should rise at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning as well as on week days, and do the necessary Sunday morning chores, and then go to church and show the business man in the city that Sunday on the farm does not consist in changing the stock from one field to another, or salting it, or unloading a load of hay that was brought in on Saturday evening.

"Coming to the meals at the meal hour makes it easy on the wife so she can arrange her household duties in order, as can also the husband his farm work.

"Men of worth and standing in the shop and city tell me that if order and system were used on the farm they would go back to the farm. If the farmer wants to keep his sons and daughters on the farm he must not lengthen the hours for a day's work at both ends. Limit the hours of work on the farm to twelve or thirteen with pay for overtime, and freedom to the hired man on Sunday."

The Country Life Commission welcomes letters like this, because as Prof. L. H. Bailey, chairman of the commission, recently pointed out, one of the objects of the investigations of the commission will be to obtain, as fully as possible, the opinions of both farmers and of their hands concerning the question of farm labor and the condition of hired help. It is likely that when the Country Life Commission reaches Indiana in the tour of the country which it will make early next month it will endeavor to get into personal touch with this letter writer.

SOCIETY

There has been little to grumble about this week for beautiful weather usually puts people in a corresponding mood. Besides there has been some activity, socially, enough to stir the dead calm which existed earlier in the season. There have been more weddings than there were days in the week for them to take place on and parties of one kind or another have been more frequent than the newspaper society columns have chronicled. The temptation to get out of doors, especially out of the city's center has sent every one possessing an automobile or horses and carriage to get out into the open, while those who have walked have had an equal amount of enjoyment though covering less ground.

AT THE THEATERS

Miss Barrymore Scores Signal Fort Wayne Success in Her New Play, "Lady Frederick."

Wherever Miss Ethel Barrymore has been seen in her present vehicle, the W. Somerset Maugham comedy, "Lady Frederick," it has been commented upon as the best play she has had part in, or at least the best stellar role she has essayed. That that is true, and that this charming and exceedingly popular actress is now even a greater favorite than before in this city, was testified by the audience which filled the Majestic theater last night and gave rapturous applause at every fall of the curtain. Miss Barrymore has always been delightful and magnetic, her beauty and charm unquestioned, her voice a pleasure to remember and her talent manifest. But nothing, not even the fresh and sweet ingenuousness of her role in "Captain Jinks," has proven so wholly captivating, so fully pregnant with dramatic greatness as the part of Lady Frederick. There was no moment when Miss Barrymore was not fascinating. There was no moment when she was not fully acting a new role without suggestion of any previous character and Lady Frederick was so distinctively a new creation that the audience was wholly enraptured.

The comedy itself is highly entertaining. It sparkles all the time with humor, witty repartee and brilliant epigram. Dullness is never apparent, not even lurking in the background. The story has something of a plot, but the cleverness of the play is in the continual brightness of the lines and the absence of any hackneyed theme or situation. Not only is the comedy a beautiful setting for Miss Barrymore, but it gives others parts equally fine employment. There are moments of breathless interest and the second act develops with an originality that bespeaks for its author a great future.

The work of Bruce McRae, who has been Miss Barrymore's leading man for a number of seasons, was equally captivating and interesting with the play and with Miss Barrymore's acting. As Paradine Fouldes, a once rejected lover who again succumbs to the charms of Lady Frederick and becomes her accepted suitor in marriage as the curtain falls on the last act, Mr. McRae has a role as admirably suited to him as any he has had heretofore. He interprets it with artistic taste and his skilful acting of the part contributes greatly to the success of the entertainment. Jennie Eustace gives a finished presentation of the part of Lady Mereston, and while the company throughout gives excellent support, the work of Orlando Daly, Arthur Eliot and Charles Hammond merits individual mention. The play is handsome and effectively staged.

IN THE CHURCHES

Miss Dawson Addresses Society.

"The Churches in Rome" was the subject of a very interesting and altogether entertaining talk given on Friday afternoon by Miss Hadjie Dawson at a meeting of the Dorcas society in the parlors of Trinity English Lutheran church. Mrs. C. M. Dawson and daughter recently returned from a year's trip abroad. They spent considerable time in Rome and hence Miss Dawson was thoroughly conversant with her subject and delighted all present.

A FOOD LESSON

That the Teacher Won't Forget.

Teaching school is sometimes very arduous work. If the teacher is not robust and in good health, she can't do her best for her scholars or for her own satisfaction.

When it becomes a question of proper food for brain work, as in school teaching, many teachers have found Grape-Nuts ideal.

"I have been for many years a teacher, and several months ago found myself in such a condition that I feared I should have to give up work," writes a N. Y. teacher.

"So nervous was I, that dizziness and spells of faintness were frequent and my head and stomach gave me much trouble.

"Several physicians who treated me gave me only temporary relief and the old ails returned.

"About three months ago I dropped all medicine and began eating Grape-Nuts morning and night. Now, my head is clear, pain in stomach entirely gone, and I have gained in flesh. I am not only continuing in school, but have engaged to teach another year.

"I owe my restored health, a brighter outlook on life and relief from doctor bills to Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason."

Pattern for Plain Wrapper.

By Mrs. Jane For

7 SIZES 32 TO 44 BUST

Fancy negligees and kimonas have their uses, but they cannot take the place of the old fashioned wrapper. Illustrative of an exceptionally pretty model of the latter is the design shown. The pattern is cut in seven sizes, from thirty-two to forty-four inches bust measure. To copy it for the average woman requires nine and one-quarter yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, or seven and three-eighths yards thirty-six inches in width.

The wrapper has a front yoke, the lower edge of which is cut pointed, and can be finished either with a narrow ruffle or simply outlined with two or three rows of narrow braid stitched flat.

The collar made be made either in standing or turn down style and trimmed to match the yoke. The center back of the body portion is laid in narrow pleats and stitched from the neck to the waist line, where it is finished with a strap of the material. The skirt may be finished in either short sweep or round length.

The ribbon ties are attached to the under arm seams and when looped at the front serve to hold the fulness in place. A narrow belt of the goods can be used in place of the ribbon.

Either tub or woolen fabrics may be used in copying this model, and if the wrapper is neatly made it will really be quite dressy for morning wear.

For utility a dark material should be selected, either in a plain color or with a small figure or narrow stripe. But there are so many dainty light goods and they are so pretty that for house dresses one is tempted to sacrifice serviceability to beauty,unless the garment is only to be used occasionally to slip on while performing some duty that would be sure to smudge and ruin a light colored material.

A soft gray or pink cashmere having a polka dot or narrow stripe of white would make up prettily in this pattern. Either colored material could be trimmed with black velvet ribbon and the edge of the ruffle buttonhole scalloped with pink silk twist.

GLASS TOYS.

Glass toys are the latest for babies. They are intended to replace the dear old painted articles that baby would put into his mouth and consequently run serious danger of lead poisoning. But to the onlooker it would seem as though death by glass were little preferable to death from paint, and that baby is quite as likely to endanger his life through breakage of his toy as he is by sucking it.

Broadly this is true, but the glass of which playthings are made is so heavy that it takes a regular Sandow of a young one to hold them. The object of thickness is, of course, to lessen the danger of breakage, but even the strongest can chip at the edge, and a splinter is capable of doing a good deal of damage.

As a matter of fact, only the babies of the rich are likely to be protected in this doubtful fashion, for the toys made of glass are by no means inexpensive. The healthy youngsters of ordinary families will have to thrive upon wood and paint as did their forbears.

GREEN TOMATO CATSUP.

Chop fine seven pounds green tomatoes and four red peppers, excluding the seeds. Add one quart vinegar, and cook together two hours. Now add one pound brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls salt and two of mustard, one teaspoonful ground cloves, one tablespoonful cinnamon and the same amount of allspice. Boil two hours longer, strain and seal.

BETROTHAL TOKENS.

The important moment in which the bridegroom-elect slips upon the third finger of the left hand of his lady love the outward and visible sign of their engagement is to the woman one of the supreme moments of life.

Few men, however, are valiant enough to sally forth with the declaration of love upon their lips and in their pocket the betrothal ring. They usually leave the pleasant task of choosing the ring to a later moment, after due deliberation with the affianced one as to her taste in stones and patterns.

Our great grandmothers were fond of receiving a triple band of gems, each separate, though intended to be worn together and each set solid with one type of gem. A ruby band, an emerald one and a diamond one was a favorite trio.

Such rings are again being sold in London, but are far less frequently asked for than the newly modish gypsy ring and the popular and effective cross-over design, surmounted at the two ends by a single big pearl and a diamond.

Far more diamonds are sold than colored stones for the ring of betrothal, though at present there are indications that the ruby and diamond, symbolical of the flame and purity of love, are being rather widely chosen.

It sometimes happens that a girl prefers a bangle as her gage d'amour, riveted upon the wrist in such a manner that it can never be removed without the aid of a jeweler, and on rare occasions a richly jeweled cross is chosen.

Men wear bangles fixed upon the upper arm far more often than is generally supposed, and these are engraved inside with the name of their lady love and the date of the betrothal.

Such bridegrooms frequently approve of the continental fashion of wearing a wedding ring, and at the altar, after having married the woman of their choice with the prescribed circlet, receive from her a duplicate, which is unostentatiously slipped on, without, of course, any words being said, while the ceremony is being conducted.—Woman's Life.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Raifsynder, of Toledo, are here on their wedding trip and are stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Raifsnyder, the parents of the groom. The couple were married in Toledo last Monday. Mr. Raifsnyder was born and reared in Fort Wayne leaving six years ago for Toledo where he has been employed since as a clerk in the Lake Shore offices.

SATURDAY, OCT. 17, 1908.

Is the nocturnal lid also a Sunday lid? Fits pretrily enough for Sunday wear and hope to see it on tomorrow.

Editors everywhere are puzzled to know whether they should classify that Berlin balloon race as aerial or aquatic sports.

Campaign has reached the straw ballot stage. Well remember how Grover Cleveland was crushingly defeated that fashion in 1892 and how William J. Bryan in the same way pursued his scintillating and triumphant way to the white house four years later.

William Randolph Hearst says he was taking a bath when a process server sought him in connection with the Haskell suit. Unless Editor Hearst has modified his recently expressed opinion of Haskell, doubtless he immediately jumped in the tub and washed himself again.

The honorable fleet of the honorable United States is pulling into Yokohama a day late and badly disarranging the plans of the Mikado and his folks. Notwithstanding all this, the honorable fleet is assured that it is nevertheless making everybody in Japan happy by coming at all and is begged to take all the time it needs to arrive.

For several nights Mayor Hosey has caused a very stringent enforcement of the saloon laws. There is considerable speculation as to what he will do respecting an enforcement of the Sunday laws tomorrow. The mayor, no doubt, fully understands and appreciates what the consistent course must be. Having shown that he can enforce the 11 o'clock closing laws he should now give demonstration that he can close the saloons on Sunday. There is no question of his entire ability to do so. And while the mayor is personally conducting this law and order crusade he will add greatly to the good he is doing by projecting a personal inquiry into the character of a number of dives of conspicuous bad odor and viciousness. The brewers are going to do this—some time—but the mayor can add much to his laurels by beating the brewers to it.

A writer in the New York Post contributes a very interesting chapter of suppositious history of Indiana as a former great battleground of the two dominant parties, when the state was close and the democratic and republican parties in the nation regarded the result of its October election as an infallible barometer of what would take place in the presidential election in November following. He goes into much detail and makes an interesting showing of the drift of political sentiment in Indiana toward results in November as shown by results in October and brings his historical data down to 1896. It is all very interesting and would be important if true. The fact is, however, that Indiana has held no October election for twenty-eight years. The last marshalling of voters for an October contest took place in 1880, since which time in our quadrennial elections the voting for state and national tickets has taken place on the same day.

The lure of the rainbow must be strong, indeed, when it can draw Judge Taft into states like Tennessee and North Carolina, to plead for votes. It is gracious of the republican nominee to go to his adherents in states so hopelessly against him, but no doubt his managers in states of the north—Indiana, Ohio and Illinois, for instance—believe his time might be to vastly greater advantage spent in looking to electoral votes there is some chance to get. The republicans cannot quite give up hope that the south will some day divide its political favors.

Some very interesting testimony bearing upon the methods to "go" in high finance in New York is coming out through the process of the trial of former Magnate C. W. Morse, who has achieved the whole 57 varieties of fame in the corporation mongering and easy-money getting business. In the later testimony it is developed that a nineteen-year-old office boy with an income of $12 a week and not enough personal assets to do a ten-dollar business with a loan shark was loaned $300,000 of the funds of the Bank of North America, of which Morse was the head. This loaning of money to "dummies is not new. But this instance of it is important as illustrating the conspicuous role played by the "dummy" in high finance. Insurance scandal disclosures three years ago showed how essential the "dummy" is to the neat turning of a deal where a great deal of something is to be taken in exchange for a very little of nothing.

REIFF FINDS DAUGHTER AND SHE REFUSES TO GO HOME

Sends for Sons to Persuade Little Girl to Return to Lima.

Paul Rieff a machinist living in Lima, O., was in the city today in an effort to secure possession of Florence Reiff, a daughter eight years old who has been living at 730 West Superior street with John Limbach and his wife but for some reason the child refused to go and fainted when he went to the house last night with an officer to take her away.

Reiff stated to Humane Officer Schlaudroff, who was called into the case, that his wife ran away with Limbach some time ago and took the daughter with her leaving two sons, who are older. He secured a divorce at Lima and was given the custody of the children.

The father thinks that the child's mind as been poisoned against him as he has always treated his family well and he sent for his sons thinking they might persade her to return. Limbach refused at first to give the girl up and eventually said he would sue Reiff for her board and have a capias issued for him if he did not pay.

Reiff retorted by saying he would have Limbach arrested for living with the woman before they were married and Mr. Schlaudroff told the whole party that unless the child was turned over to the father he would have her placed with the board of children's guardians. The Limbachs finally consented to allow the girl to return with her father if she would agree to go and a telephone message was sent instructing the sons to come to Fort Wayne at once.

CURES ECZEMA QUICKLY.

New Drug, Poslam, Now Obtainable in Small Quantities.

Since its discovery one year ago, the new drug, poslam, has successfully cured thousands of chronic cases of eczema and other distressing skin afflictions. Heretofore poslam has been dispensed solely for the benefit of eczema patients in large jars sufficient for a month's treatment. This was found to be an inconvenience to many thousands who use it for minor skin troubles, such as pimples, blackheads, herpes, acne, scaly scarp, complexion blemishes, itching feet, piles, etc., which require but a small quantity to cure. To overcome this, and in response to urgent appeals, the dispensers of poslam have been obliged to adopt, in addition to the regular two-dollar package, a special fifty-cent size, which in future may be found on sale at Meyer Bros. Co., and other leading drug stores, or may be ordered direct from the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West 25th street, New York City. In all eczema cases poslam stops itching with first application, and proceeds to heal immediately: chronic cases being cured in two weeks. In less serious skin troubles, results are seen after an overnight application.

Samples for experimental purposes may still be had, free of charge, by writing to the laboratories for them.

Clinton Scherer has been appointed assistant to Chief Clerk Frank Rinehart at the Rolling Mills. The young man was formerly a messenger in the office.

Foreman H. C. Daseler, of the Pennsylvania power plant, has gone up the St. Joseph river to remain until Monday. He expects to catch some fine fish.

Blacksmith Thomas Kavanaugh, who had a knee injured by a fall several days ago, has recovered and will resume work at the Wabash shops next Monday.

Spt. John J. Sims, of the Detroit division of the Wabash, has recovered from injuries received two weeks ago by being run down by an automobile at Detroit.

J. V. Palmer, T. H. Bueter, Henry Beckman, W. H. Miller and E. D. Banks are absent from the Pennsylvania shops today on account of sickness.

J. X. Klingenberger, foreman of the Pennsylvania passenger car department of the shops, will be the guest of friends in Chicago next week.

E. P. Pry, Pennsylvania signal inspector, was in the city today looking over the signal apparatus in the company's yards. Mr. Pry resides in Pittsburg.

Chief Clerk Samuel Stocks, of the Wabash freight office, went to Hamilton today to spend a few days fishing and hunting. He will return Monday with a box of fish for "the boys."

H. J. Knapp, a clerk in the Pennsylvania shop offices, has returned from Chicago, where he spent five weeks in the interest of his health, which has been poor for several months.

Ed Yergens, a machinist's apprentice at the Wabash shops, had the end of the little finger of his left hand crushed off this morning by getting it caught beneath a heavy casting.

Local Freight Conductor C. H. Thornburg, of the Toledo-Fort Wayne district, has left the hospital at Peru, after a painful experience with boils, and will soon resume his duties on the road.

T. R. Cook, engineer of motive power of the Pennsylvania, was at Port Huron, Mich., yesterday inspecting a tunnel which is one of the greatest engineering feats in that part of the country.

H. G. Bergman and Herman Lampert resigned positions at the Electric works this morning and Charles Morris took a position there. The latter will be assigned to the winding department. Mr. Lampert will go to Chicago to work.

Nearly the entire clerical force at the offices of the Bass Foundry and Machine company, on Hanna street, left this afternoon for Clear Lake, where they will be the guests of T. L. Comparet, who has a cottage at that place.

Mrs. John O'Malley, of Chicago, is visiting her brother, William Fry, of Ewing street. Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley formerly resided in Fort Wayne and he was employed in the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop.

M. R. Harmon, supervisor of tracks of the third district of the Nickel Plate, with headquarters at Fostoria, is dead. He was promoted to the position of supervisor less than a month ago and soon afterwards was taken down with typhoid fever, from which he died.

While handling molten metal some of it splashed out and got in the shoe of David Jokerst, at the Kerr Murray works, Thursday. The foot was painfully burned and the man will be off duty a week at least as a result.

J. E. Kennelly, a messenger at the Pennsylvania round house, is laid up with a lame foot, the result of puncturing the member with a piece of wire. R. Spangler, also of the round house, is off duty as the result of falling from the running board of an engine. He had one of his knees injured.

One of the old employes in the Pennsylvania shops who will soon pass to the retired list is H. C. Horstman, who has worked there forty-three years. He was formerly employed at the east shops, but on account of failing health was transferred to the planning mills and given lighter work a few months ago.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Newingham and their two children will leave early next week upon a western trip which will last two weeks. They will spend a good portion of the time with relatives and friends in Seattle, Wash. Mr. Newingham is assistant foreman of the passenger car building part of the Pennsylvania shops.

Huntington News-Democrat: "Miss Fae Hunter has returned from Fort Wayne, where she has been working in the offices of the Fort Wayne Electric company, in the absence of the regular office girl, who was detained from her duties on account of sickness."

Engineer George Horn, of the Wabash, has been transferred from the through freight service to the local freight service and will hereafter run between Toledo and Fort Wayne. The company now has four trains in the service between the two points named. Two runs direct, via the old line, and the other two go via Montpelier.

Clyde Pritchard, assistant Nickel Plate ticket agent, was summoned home from Chicago yesterday on account of his services being needed in the office. He has not completed his vacation term, but he will probably hold the remaining time in reserve to a more opportune time. The changes mentioned by the Sentinel last Thursday were responsible for the recall of Mr. Pritchard.

The roof which shelters the employes in Foreman Davison's department of the Wayne Knitting Mills is being raised and lest the machinery might be injured by the exposure, it has been removed and the working force is taking a lay off pending the work. A third story is being added to that part of the factory to meet the demands for floor space. When the work is finished, fifty new machines will be installed in the plant.

The "Queen of the Rockies" passed through the city this morning, coming in over the G. R. & I. from Richmond, where they played last night, and leaving over the Wabash for Adrian, where they will show tonight. There are ten people in the party and they have been, so the manager said, playing to good houses and making money. A number of the Fort Wayne friends of the members were at the depot to see them this morning.

The foundation for the $20,000 dwelling house to be erected on Fairfield avenue by Treasurer C. A. Dunkelburg, of S. F. Bowser & Company, is nearly completed and Monday Contractor Grotholtman will take up the carpenter work. Other improvements of that character to be made this fall are two $2,800 houses on Woodland avenue, for which the material is now being delivered on the ground. They are being built for the City Suburban Realty company.

WILL REBUILD AT ONCE FOR THE FORMER OCCUPANTS

Owners of Buildings Damaged by Fire to Start Work Immediately.

As soon as the insurance adjusters complete their work on the King and Keefer buildings, which were badly damaged by fire Friday morning, the owners intend to start rebuilding operations at once. It is probable that about two months will be required to put the buildings in first-class shape again and when they are completed they will be occupied by the former tenants, the Outfitters' company.

Miss Sarah King arrived in the city last evening from Rome City, where she has been spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Otto G. Klingenberg and family, and this morning stated that her entire loss will be covered by the insurance she carried, which amounts to $8,000, instead of $6,000, as reported yesterday. The adjusters are expected Monday and the contract for rebuilding both the King and the Keefer buildings will be let.

Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic, and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had LaGrippe last fall as I thought in a mild form. I was weak, tired feeling, and short of breath; could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and now I feel so much better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine, and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done me."

BIG LEAGUE OWNERS ARE AFTER CARR FOR 1909

Indianapolis Manager is Sought by Several Major Organizations.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 17.—Indianapolis fans are watching with considerable interest the developments in the argument over the Stallings case, because the disposition of this matter may determine whether Charles Carr is to manage the Indianapolis champions again next year or not. It is known that Carr has been seriously considered in connection with the management of the Highlanders and if Farrel is persuaded that Stallings will not do, overtures are likely to be made to the local manager.

It is not likely that the Stallings matter will be settled for several weeks. It is reported that Farrell has offered him a contract, but the deal has hardly been closed. Stallings, it is reported, is objectionable to certain magnates in the American league and even President Johnson does not desire his presence in that organization, it is reported.

Carr will be offered a very tempting contract to return to Indianapolis for a term of years, in fact the contract will be almost as good as he could get from a major league club. Boston has figured on him to a certain extent, while it is reported that one association magnate had offered him a half interest in his club. Carr's contract with Indianapolis expired this fall and he is now considering all of these propositions.

Possibly a decision will not be reached before the holidays, as it will take some time for baseball affairs to become settled to the extent that the manager of the champions knows what he is doing.

The Cubs planned a barnstorming trip through Indiana and wanted to play at the local park next Tuesday, but President Watkins could not accommodate them as the park is torn up. A gridiron has been laid out for the football games and the work of remodeling and enlarging the park is in progress.

President Watkins said he had failed entirely to get any players by draft, as the major league clubs had grabbed about all of the talent that was available. He put in a couple of drafts, but the men had previously been drafted by major league clubs.

BASE BALL MEN ARE WITH PRESIDENT CARSON

Think His Stand on the Farm Proposition a Good One.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 17.—Communications from some of the most important baseball men in the country have been received by President F. R. Carson of the Central league supporting his action taken in the recent meeting of the magnates held at Evansville, Ind., regarding the use of "farmed" players from the major leagues.

"Here is the situation in a nutshell," said President Carson yesterday. "After a baseball player has played two or three games in the major leagues and then is released to some minor league club, they believe they are worth more than clubs in the Central league can afford. And after they play a season in the Central, and their owners see their possibilities they are ordered to report for another trial. Consequently the managers of the Central league lose the players and are out a bunch of money paid in high salaries. It is a poor proposition to use "farmed" players and I am very much pleased with the action taken by the directors of the league."

Major league clubs that offer new recruits to the minor leagues next season will receive the cold shoulder from the Central league. No "farmed" players will be accepted and the league will be composed of drafted or purchased men. Already managers in the league have announced several "finds" for next season, principally Bade Myers, of Dayton. He has secured three or four young players from a Kentucky league and will have them report for practice early.

"Aggie" Grant, manager of the South Bend club has also been active and will probably secure several new recruits from the smaller leagues. It is probable that he will land four or five recruits from the Southern Michigan league and a couple of youngsters from the Van Wert circuit.

FANS FAVOR MOVE BY CENTRAL.

Support League in Resolution to Taboo "Farmed" Players.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 16.—President F. R. Carson, of the Central league, is in receipt of many communications congratulating him and the directors of the Central league on the stand taken at the recent Evansville meeting in regard to the use of "farmed players" from the major league. The decision of the Central not to use any men from a class higher than the Central unless the men are purchased outright meets with much favor, not only among the magnates, but also among the fans, who support the clubs.

The Central league president figured that "farmed" players cost too much money in salaries and that the club owners do not have the opportunity of building up stars from the "bushes" when the places are filled by loaned talent. This, of course, cuts down the receipts for the season in that the clubs do not have as many players to sell.

While the Central league for three successive years has sold or lost by draft more players than any other class B organization in the country the magnates in 1909 expect to double the sales made this year.

Toledo, O., Oct. 17.—George Ketcham, former owner of Crescens, is the real purchaser of Allen Winter, reported as sold to A. Schlesinger, of Vienna, Austria. Ketcham will place his new purchase in the hands of Louis Winans, of Brighton, England, with the hope of capturing all the trotting laurels of Europe. It is believed Allen Winter will do the mile in two minutes flat.

Jack Sheridan Had to Umpire or Starve

Jack Sheridan claims that no one would think of becoming an umpire if he could get a good job as a burglar or a stoker on an ocean liner. He says it is only when a man is down and out that he will accept a position as umpire. Sheridan said that before he himself would take the place fate threw him down, kicked him in the ribs and blackened his eyes.

Sheridan was playing second base for the Sacramento, Cal., team when fate decided to take a hand in his affairs. He was playing a fast game for that team and attracted the attention of the Montgomery, Ala., manager. The Montgomery team was hitting up a fast pace in their league, but the management thought they needed a fast second baseman and that Jack was just the man they were looking for.

After some dickering Sheridan was sold to Montgomery, and advance money and a ticket to that city were sent to him. Jack was young and full of the buisterousness of youth, so he thought he needed a vacation before taking up his duties with the Alabama team. For several weeks, therefore, the Montgomery fans looked in vain for the star player who they thought would round up their team.

Finally, after taking his little fling Jack packed up and trotted across the continenet to Alabama. On the day Sheridan showed up in Montgomery there was great rejoicing among the fans. Then the fates got busy on the job. The team had been winning steadily, but as soon as Jack joined in the affray they started to lose, and lost sixteen straight games. Although Jack was playing a good game during this time all the blame was laid on his shoulders.

When the sixteenth game was lost Sheridan was released and fined the amount of his back salary. He was thousands of miles from home and broke. He started to walk home, having nothing else to do, and managed to make about fifty miles.

By that time Sheridan was up against it so badly that he was willing to do almost anything. "I was almost ready to become an umpire," Jack says. "But not quite. Fate had to give me a few more raps before I was willing to descend so low."

Finally he reached a logging camp away out in the woods and he explained to the boss that he was the greatest little logging expert that ever happened. Although his ability in this line may have been slight, his ability as a talker won the day and he was given an ax and told to go out and chop down trees.

Jack, although a truthful man, was not in the habit of chopping down cherry trees when a boy, so he hadn't the slightest idea of how to go about it. He chopped first on one side and then on the other until he had cut a little ring all around the tree. At the end of the day he had not finished even the one tree. While he was figuring on stopping work one of the men came out from the camp with a team of oxen to haul back the load that Jack was supposed to have ready.

"Where is your trees?" said the woodsman.

"Here it is," answered Jack.

"Do you mean to say that is all you have done all day long?" the woodsman asked.

"Of course," said Jack. Look how big it is."

Then he started chopping to finish the job so that the oxen might haul the log back to camp. Of course, Jack had no idea about the way to chop a tree in order to have it fall in any desired direction, so he whaled away haphazzard, with the result that the tree toppled over squarely on the backs of the unlucky oxen.

The woodsman when he saw his yoke killed, picked up the ax and started after Sheridan. Jack stood not upon the order of going but beat the world's record, or at least, so he claims, for the next half mile.

Then Jack was up against it for fair. He was afraid to go back to the camp for fear of the man with the business-like ax and he didn't know how to find his way out of the woods. For several days he wandered around in the woods, living by himself, as an umpire should, and grubbing in the dirt for roots to eat.

After keeping alive in this way for a time and living far from the abode of men hated as he thought, by every one, Jack managed to make his way out of the woods and got word to Peck Sharp, who then was playing for Keokuk in the Three-Eye league.

"Peck," he wrote, "I have been living on roots and weeds. Every man's hand is turned against me. I've had hard knocks of all kinds from every one I met, so that now I think I am ready to take a job as umpire."

RUBNOMORES AT TOP AT CLOSE OF WEEK

Win Three More and Still Have Clean Winning Record.

Standing of the Clubs.

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Rubnomores	6	0	1.000
Elks	4	2	.666
Dermotines	4	2	.666
Married Men	2	4	.333
Superbas	1	5	.166
Marquettes	1	5	.166

The second week of the St. Mary's Athletic Club Bowling league closed with the Rubnomores at the top of the list with a clean record of six winning games and a percentage of 1.000. The Elks and Dermotines are tied for second with four wins and two games lost.

The scoring was better during the week than it was the week of the opening games for the reason that many of the men had not gotten their eyes on the pins and were not in as good form as they would have been with a little practice.

The new equipment of the alleys is getting broken in and the prospects for an elegant season of high-class sport is most flattering. A great amount of enthusiasm has been awakened and applications for places on the teams are being received all the time and the organization is in the verw best of condition.

A. Haas was the winner of the prize for high score during the week, having tabbed 234 in one of his league games. The men are practicing hard and the honor of winning the awards that are made weekly is developing some strong bowlers. The program for next week is as follows:

Monday—Dermotines and Rubnomores.
Tuesday—Married Men and Superbas.
Thursday—Elks and Marquettes.

OFFICERS WERE ON HAND.

Officers were on hand last night to prevent finish fight scheduled for 11 o'clock at Saengerbund hall between two local men. The promoters saw they were up against it and made no attempt to pull off the affair.

DR. HARDMAN, SPECIALIST
Cures Pelvic, Nervous and Chronic Diseases and Guarantees Satisfactory Results in All Cases He Accepts for Treatment

Successful Treatment Depends Upon a Thorough and Scientific Examination.

No physician can expect to CURE these CHRONIC and DEEP-SEATED diseases until he has made a thorough examination and definitely located the cause of the trouble.

The human body is much too complicated for one man to thoroughly understand every part of it.

There are too many diseases that mankind is subject to for any one physician to fully understand and treat. Hence it becomes necessary in order to accomplish the best results to take up and make a special study of a certain region or a group of diseases that by their nature are allied to one another.

There are many who are satisfied by a hasty inquiry or a superficial examination, and are blindly led into given palliative remedies, which though temporarily relieving the symptoms, ultimately discourage the sufferer, because of a recurrence of the disease. I do not treat symptoms. I CURE the disease and the symptoms disappear.

Years of experience in the treatment of PELVIC, NERVOUS and CHRONIC DISEASES have enabled me to perfect methods that will POSITIVELY CURE where the ordinary methods have failed.

Thousands of men and women are dragging out lives of suffering and torture because of some chronic or deep-seated disease that is sapping their vitality, lessening their ambitions, breaking down their nervous system and as surely ruining their chances of successfully competing with their fellow men.

In this day of active competition to attain that measure of SUCCESS for which we were intended, it is absolutely necessary that all the faculties should be unimpaired.

Nearly all NERVOUS DISEASES, including NERVOUS BREAKDOWN, are the direct result of a disease of one or more of the Pelvic Organs.

TIME PROVES ALL THINGS AND WISE PEOPLE INVESTIGATE.

If you will give me just one-half the chance with your case I will give you the CURE you have paid others for.

VARICOCELE, STRICTURE, RUPTURE, PILES, FISTULA, ETC., cured without the knife and without detention from business.

BLOOD POISON—I use only the most advanced methods in the treatment of Blood Poison and kindred diseases.

PROSTATIC ENLARGEMENT—Results from inflammation. I reduce the enlargement and have been able to cure about 90 per cent of all cases.

ECZEMA and other skin diseases quickly and permanently cured.

FREE EXAMINATION—I charge you nothing for this examination and if I accept your case for treatment the door of HEALTH is open for you, no matter what your past experience may have been.

RATE WAR IS PROMISED IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN

American Company and the Japanese Line Engaged in Combat.

San Francisco, Oct. 17.—A rate war in the Pacific ocean, with the Pacific Mail Stemship company opposing the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, a subsidized line, is expected.

The Japanese company is reported to have made a cut of twenty per cent. in freight rates and the Pacific Mail is reported to have instructed its oriental agents to meet any reduction made.

With further cuts and counter cuts in prospect, the commercial war is regarded on this coast as of the most importance, owing to the diminishing American marine and the constant improvements and increases of the Japanese steamship lines. The Pacific Mail, however, has the backing of the Harriman system and is expected to meet the opposition in an effort to retain its business.

A. J. Frey, assistant manager of the Pacific Mail company, said the line which operates five steamers, has been operated recently at a loss of $2,000 per day, while the Japanese ships were allowed about $35,000 per voyage by the government and the Canadian Pacific company's steamers receiver a subsidy of about $20,000.

The first cut in rates was made by the Pacific Mail company at a conference of steamer agents at Seattle. The readjustment was said to be necessary because of the ruling of the interstate commerce commission requiring the steamship companies to publish rates on shipments originating outside this country.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 13, 1908.

To the Editor of the Sentinel:

If you think it is not improper, I would be glad to have space in your paper for a word of personal remark. It touches my feelings to be supposed by any of my fellow citizens to be unmindful of the just obligations of old friendship and good neighborship, as some of them think I am in opposing the election of Mr. Fleming. His father, William Fleming, was my friend and I was his. In acuteness, intelligence and energy the son is a chip off the old block. I have admired his business and social qualities ever since he came to manhood. I think a citizen is sometimes justified in disregarding his party affiliations to cast his vote for a friend as a candidate for an administrative office. But in the case of a legislative office, where the issues relate to the making of laws which will affect the welfare of the whole community, the voter owes a duty to the public higher than any obligation of friendship, or even relationship. If I had a brother, who was a free-trader, I would not vote for him for congress nor ask him to vote for me. I voted for William Fleming for Treasurer of State, but when I was a candidate for Congress he supported my opponent and I fully recognized his right and duty to do so.

The present local option law represents my ideal of temperance legislation. I have been hoping for it for forty years. To use all my efforts to keep it on the statute book unimpaired in its efficiency is the highest duty which I owe to the people of Indiana at this time. Hence, I cannot support Mr. Fleming.

I believe also, that our corporation laws ought to be made more stringent rather than less so, as would have been the effect of Mr. Fleming's bill.

Charcoal Purifies Any Breath

And In Its Purest Form Has Long Been Known as the Greatest Gas Absorber.

Pure willow charcoal will oxidize almost any odor and render it sweet and pure. A panful in a foul cellar will absorb deadly fumes, for charcoal absorbs one hundred times its volume in gas.

The ancients knew the value of charcoal and administered it in cases of illness, especially pertaining to the stomach. In England today charcoal poultices are used for ulcers, boils, etc., while some physicians in Europe claim to cure many skin diseases by covering the afflicted skin with charcoal powder.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges go into the mouth and transfer foul odors at once into oxygen, absorb noxious gases and acids and when swallowed mix with the digestive juices and stop gas making, fermentation and decay.

Bad breath simply cannot exist when charcoal is used. There are no ifs or ands about this statement. Don't take our word for it, but look into the matter yourself. Ask your druggist or physician, or better still, look up charcoal in your encyclopedia. The beauty of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges is that the highest pharmaceutical expert knowledge obtainable has been used to prepare a lozenge that will give to man the best form of charcoal for use.

Pure willow and honey is the result. Two or three after meals and at bedtime sweeten the breath, stop decay of teeth, aid the digestive apparatus and promote perfect bowel action. They enrich the supply of oxygen to the system and thereby revivify the blood and nerves.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are sold everywhere in vast quantities, thus they must have merit. Every druggist carries them, price, twenty-five cents per box, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail, free. Address F. A. POINTS OUT LABOR'S PLAIN DUTY IN CAMPAIGN

President Gompers Says Relief Will Only Come from Democracy.

Labor's plain duty in the present campaign was pointed out by President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before a great audience at Princess rink Friday evening when he told the toilers that labor had found the republican party opposed to its welfare; that the republican congress had defeated every measure the working people had asked for, and that its leaders had scornfully declined to place in the national platform any of the principles for which labor is striving. Democracy, on the other hand, had shown itself the friend of the workingman, and this is why Mr. Gompers, a republican since early manhood, is urging the election of Mr. Bryan and a democratic congress.

It was in many ways the most notable gathering ever held under the auspices of labor in Fort Wayne. Signalized by the presence of men long distinguished as leaders in the labor movement, who urged with eloquent conviction the cause of labor, it was deeply impressive. Edgar A. Perkins, state president of the Indiana Federation of Labor, presided, and in addition to the appeal of the "grand old man of labor" there was an address by John Moffett, president of the United Hatters of America. Mr. Gompers was paid a loving tribute by the Cigarmakers' union of Fort Wayne in the presentation of a huge bouquet of chrysanthemums, and in the course of his address the famous labor leader delivered a reply to a challenge for debate by Charles S. Bash, of this city. He scored the records of James S. Sherman, republican nominee for vice president, and James E. Watson, republican nominee for governor of Indiana, declaring that both had shown themselves to be lined up with the enemies of labor.

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President of the American Federation of Labor.

Great Audience Waited.

An audience that completely filled Princess rink waited patiently for the arrival of the "flying squadron" of labor, which was late in reaching Fort Wayne. It had been an arduous day of campaigning in which stops were made at Hammond, Gary, South Bend, Elkhart, Goshen, Kendallville and Garrett. A committee from the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor met the Gompers party at Kendallville and accompanied the speakers to Fort Wayne in a special car over the Toledo and Chicago interurban line, stopping for an hour's address by Mr. Gompers at Garrett. It was after 8 o'clock when the car reached Fort Wayne, and the Citizens' band led the way to the rink, where the big crowd was in waiting.

President Gompers, worn by the fatigue of the day, went to his hotel and lay down for half an hour of rest while the meeting was gotten under way. He plainly showed the stress of physical exertion at his age of 58 years, and his voice was husky, but he spoke with marked earnestness and was plainly heard in almost every portion of the big hall. Upon the stage were the vice presidents named by the local labor unions, and when the state labor officials stepped upon the stage they were given a tremendous outburst of applause. L. D. Redding, president of the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor, called the meeting to order and presented State President Edgar A. Perkins, of Indianapolis, as chairman of the evening.

Mr. Moffett's Address.

Mr. Perkins at once introduced John Moffett, of Orange, N. J., president of the United Hatters of America, who spoke until the arrival of Mr. Gompers. Mr. Moffett began with the declaration that he had always been a republican, but he desired to enter a plea of "not guilty" this year. The issue to the laboring man, he said, is whether the workingmen shall follow their trusted leader, Samuel Gompers, or whether they shall be marshalled under the leadership of the arch-enemies of labor, VanCleave, Parry and Post. He explained the reason for labor's participation in politics this year, declaring it had been forced upon the workingman because it had been impossible to get justice from a republican congress.

Mr. Moffett cited a number of court decisions in which labor held that it had been unfairly treated, among them the suit of the Manufacturers' association against the Hatmakers' union under the Sherman anti-trust law. "In that decision," said Mr. Moffett, "every member of a labor union is held to be a member of a trust, and if that is true, I would like to have you tell me when you drew your dividends." He recounted the opposition to labor measures in congress by Speaker Cannon, backed by "Sunny Jim" Sherman and James E. Watson and others. He raised a laugh when he referred to Mr. Taft as the "proxy candidate" for president.

"Taft says he did more for labor than did Gompers," continued Mr. Moffett. "Well, he did; he put labor leaders in jail for obeying the orders of their unions, and we are prepared to admit that Mr. Gompers never did that for labor." "Son-in-law Nick, the King-Maker," also received some attention from Mr. Moffett, and in conclusion he said: "Labor has done its work well, but your work will be incomplete unless on November 3 you elect William J. Bryan and a democratic congress, and it is for you to see that James E. Watson, republican whip of the house, is not placed in the governor's chair in Indiana."

Greeting for Mr. Gompers.

Escorted by John J. Dailey, of the Machinists' union, President Gompers stepped out upon the stage as Mr. Moffett was concluding his address and was greeted by a storm of applause. He had doffed his light fedora hat in the wings and placed a black skull cap upon his head, and was attired in a dark suit of clothes with a black prince Albert coat that gave him a clerical appearance. He smilingly bowed his acknowledgments of the kindly greeting, and as Mr. Moffett took his seat O. P. Smith, of Logansport, vice president of the State Federation of Labor, secured recognition from his position on the floor near the stage. In a tender expression of regard on behalf of the Cigarmakers' union of Fort Wayne he presented the handsome bouquet of cut flowers to Mr. Gompers, and there was renewed cheering as the chrysanthemums were passed to Mr. Gompers upon the stage. The federation president was formerly a cigarmaker, and he was plainly touched by this kindly remembrance from the craft in Fort Wayne. His first words as he was introduced by Mr. Perkins embodied a feeling of appreciation of the remembrance.

Message From the Toilers.

"I come to Indiana," Mr. Gompers said, "to bring you a message from the men and women of this country who toil, who produce wealth by the work of their hands and brains, who do so great a service to society, and who bid you Godspeed in the great uplift in which you and they are engaged, for the common welfare of all our people.

"There are some people who are pessimists, who look upon the darker side always, and who see no hope for the perpetuation of liberty. But you cannot find that spirit prevailing among the workingmen who have showed the intelligence and the grit to organize for their common protection. The very act of organization is an expression of their hope in the future of our country, and I am confident that the American people, when cognizant of the dangers that confront them, and aware of the influences that are trying to undermine the republic we love and revere, will not be found wanting, but will take the proper course to defend, uphold and perpetuate the republic of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln."

Mr. Gompers said the people must never lose sight of the fact that the dangers that confront them are like those which worked to the destruction of the Roman republic, and he likened the patricians of ancient Rome to the favored interests of America. No tyrant, bent upon destroying popular liberty, ever failed to find complaisant judges to enclose in the garb of law the very tyrannies he proposed to accomplish.

Menace to Popular Liberty.

The franchises, special privileges and immunities granted by law to certain classes in this country he pronounced the gravest menace to popular liberty, and it is time for the people to remember the immortal words of Thomas Jefferson, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." The Declaration of Independence is as much needed now as it was in the days of the republic's founders.

"The American working man stands today, asking for no special privileges, but looking the world squarely in the face, demanding equality of opportunity before the law, and he will be satisfied with nothing else." Mr. Gompers accused the republican party of trying to control the working people by dangling the spectacle of the full dinner pail before them, and he likened this to the common practice of controlling cattle by filling their stomachs. It is essential to existence that material wants be supplied, he said, but there comes times when people must make material sacrifices to preserve great principles. That is what the men of the revolution did, and the men of the civil war did. "I am fully persuaded," he said, "that the American people will not be lured to their detriment by the dangling of a dinner pail that has proved to be only a picture after all. Not since 1861 has there been before the American people any question so transcendentally important to freedom as the questions presented in this campaign."

Replies to Mr. Bash.

Mr. Gompers at this juncture referred to a letter written by Charles S. Bash, of this city, asking him a number of questions and challenging him to a debate. He indulged for a time in some witty pleasantries at Mr. Bash's expense that evoked prolonged and repeated laughter, and then said:

"Mr. Bash asks a number of questions which all resolve themselves in to the one question of the tariff. Now the tariff is a question I would rather not deal with, especially in this campaign, but I shall not evade the subject. It is peculiar how insistent some people are to demand a high tariff wall against the products of European labor, but how they demand free trade in labor itself and bring over in violation of law, under contract, working men from the remotest corners of the world to compete with American labor. They bring the worst elements here and dump them on our shores. They bring in Chinese, in violation of law, and going farther, bring in the little brown men of Japan to tear down the standard of the American workingman's living. I don't want to argue protection now, but let me say that the acts of labor unions are called in question, but we say that we do not ask immunity for a single act of one of our members. We only ask fair treatment. But we demand, too that if you scour the earth and bring here to compete with our labor men who are ignorant of our laws and principles, if you bring here for your own profit men to tear down our standard of wages and of living, if these men are good enough for your purposes they are good enough for us to organize and educate and try to make better men of them. Now that is my answer to Mr. Bash and to all the Bashes. As for accepting his challonge I have neither time nor inclination for it. I have more important fish to catch. I am after bigger game."

Labor Unions and Trusts.

Mr. Gompers said the republican party proposes to apply the Sherman anti-trust act to voluntary organizations of workingmen, and make them all trusts in restraint of trade, a theory absolutely destructive of labor unions and prohibitive to the workingman's right to organize for self protection.

The unions appealed to congress to restore their rights, but failed to get any action. They appealed to the republican convention and were insulted and turned away. Then they appealed to the democrats at Denver and were received with cordiality and every demand made for the preservation of the workingman's freedom and rights was incorporated in the democratic national platform, and William J. Bryan led in the movement to have the platform so framed.

"Taft accuses the workingmen of wanting to be made 'a privileged class of wrongdoers,'" he said. "It is not true. We are asking only fair treatment. We want discrimination against us to cease. The injunction, as used by Judge Taft and Judge Gould, and other judges who base their acts on Judge Taft's original rulings, is an instrument of personal government and we claim this republic is a government by law, and because of this the workingmen have taken up the battle cry of freedom to all. Judge Taft sent to jail men who had committed no crime, who had not violated any law, and every judge who sends a workingman to jail in injunction proceedings bases his act on Judge Taft's rulings."

The Attack by Watson.

Mr. Gompers spoke at some length upon the repeated failure of labor to get any satisfaction from congress, owing to the opposition of Speaker Cannon, James E. Watson and others and then continued:

"You are confronted in your state with a condition that should receive your attention and mine. A gentleman named Watson aspires to be your governor. Indiana has many men whose names stand in the memories of patriots as men of exalted character and rank. Pray God to save Indiana from enrolling upon its banners the name of a Watson for governor.

"I was asked by labor to furnish Mr. Watson's record in congress, and I did it without comment," said the speaker, "and Watson turned on me and made a personal attack upon me. My character is above such attacks. I have lived an open life. Watson said I was an alien, not an American citizen, and again he said I had always been a democrat. Neither statement is true. I became a citizen of this country in the court in New York on October 4, 1872. I have never been a democrat. I used to be a republican, but I am not guilty this year. The republicans of my home nominated me once for state senator. The republicans of my district wanted me to run for congress, but I refused. President McKinley offered me a position on the industrial commission, as a republican I refused it. Now I have had these things published in the papers of Indianapolis and other cities in your state, and in spite of that fact Mr. Watson keeps on repeating that I have always been a democrat and that I am an alien. Now a man who will falsify and be untruthful in one thing will be unbelievable and undependable in all things."

Mr. Gompers declared that a new time, a better time, is wanted by the workingmen, and the opportunity is now at hand for them to attain this end. To attain it men like Watson and Cannon must be retired to private life.

"And you workingmen here must see," said he, "that the man who has misrepresented your district in congress is replaced by one pledged to your interests, pledged to the Denver platform. I refer to Mr. Cyrus Cline."

Prolonged cheers greeted the mention of Mr. Cline's name, and the speaker closed with an eloquent tribute to Mr. Bryan and an appeal to the workingmen, organized and unorganized, to support the democratic nominees.

Guests at a Luncheon.

Following the Princess rink meeting Mr. Gompers and his party were guests of Frank E. Purcell at a dinner at the Germania cafe. Mr. Purcell's guests in addition to Mr. Gompers were John S. Parry, of California; H. D. Albers, Elkhart, Ind., president Typographical union; Thomas E. Ryan, Newark, N. J., president United Hatters of America; R. P. Packard, Wabash, vice president Indiana Federation of Labor; John J. Keegan, Indianapolis, International Association of Machinists; John A Moffat, Orange, N. J., international president United Hatters of America; Edgar A. Perkins, Indianapolis, president State Federation of Labor; O. P. Smith, Logansport, first vice president Indiana Federation of Labor.

Mr. Gompers did a graceful courtesy in presenting to Mrs. L. D. Redding, wife of the president of the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor, the handsome bouquet which had been given him by the Cigarmakers' union. Mr. Gompers and his party left this city this morning at 8 o'clock for Huntington to continue the tour of Indiana.

"BUSTER BROWN" THIS EVENING.

Master Rice is to appear at the Majestic in "Buster Brown" this evening. Buster and his dog pal "Tige" will be presented in a manner that will delight the cockels of every small boy's heart. Buster, this season, is said to be even funnier than Outcault's famous cartoon. Cartoon plays as a rule are unholy horrors, but this dramatization of Outcault's creation is one of those exceptions which prove the rule. It is not the dramatization itself which scores particularly, but the characterization of Buster and his dog. Master Rice, as Buster, is a wonder No larger than a fairly well developed child of three, he acts with a child's simplicity and yet with a technical knowledge which stamps him from the outset as a consummate little artist. One of the most attractive scenes is said to be where Buster jabbers French like a native. Jack Bell makes Tige a four-legged masterpiece instead of sending all facial expression to the diminutive bow-wows, as his predecessors, in this most trying part have done. Most actors have sufficient difficulty in making their own physical features seem almost human on the stage, but when it comes to hiding one's face behind a canine mask and still making it speak louder than words, there's an artist in the offering somewhere. In this case Mr. Bell is the man behind the dog. To thousands and thousands of youngsters Buster and his canine pal are quite as real and far more important than any of the heroes of Mother Goose or their Sunday school lessons, and to have them represented on the stage in any but the realistic form would have been as futile as it would have proved fatal. But boy and dog, they have met the public and the public is theirs for a long time to come. The "Buster Brown" company has an entire new scenic dress this season and gorgeous new costumes as well. The musical numbers are of the whistling kind and the cast the best yet seen in this most enjoyable evening's entertainment.

—Synopsis of Scenes.—

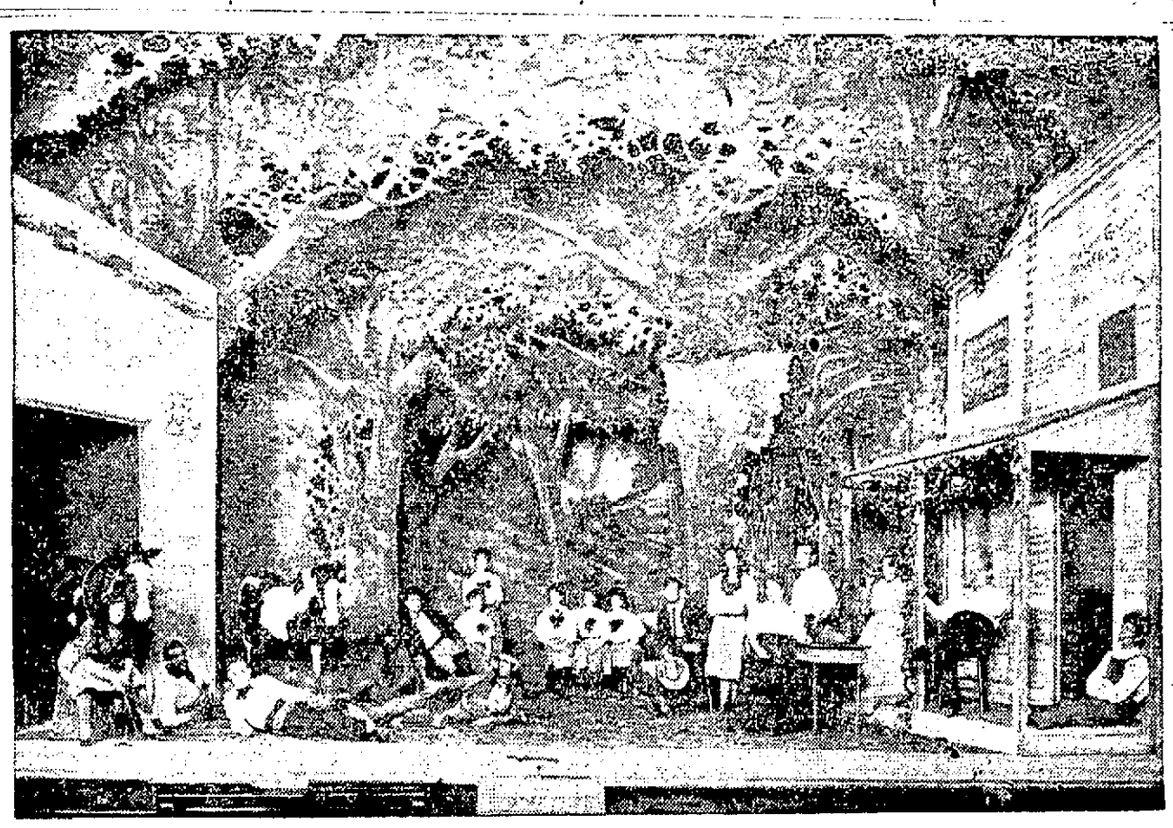
Prologue—Ruins of Peel Castle, Isle of Man.
Act I—Saloon of Coliseum Music Hall, London.
Act II—Club House of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene.
Act III—Glory's Apartments, Clement's Inn, London.
Act IV—Same as Act II.

Rich in scenic investiture, brilliantly fascinating in color and light effects, will be the presentation of the great religious drama, "The Christian," at the Majestic Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, daily matinee, when Wright Huntington and Our Own Stock company of talented players will give it a thoroughly artistic and finished production. The exacting demands of the sterling stage story are numerous. Each of these demands will be met with preparation and an artistic finish formidable in its make-up and mental equipment. There has been no hesitation either in rehearsal or mechanical construction The work of achieving the most effective results has not been neglected in the slightest suggestion. It will be the most powerful production yet attempted by our own professional players and strenuous efforts have been made to obviate even the slightest dissapointments. Buoyed up by the success and liberal patronage of the former productions the management has been enthusiastic in arranging the details for the forthcoming brilliant offering.

The stage story of Hall Caine's "The Christian" is told in a most interesting way in four acts and a prologue. The scene of the prologue is laid in the Isle of Man, where John Storm and Glory Quayle are lovers and playmates. John is rich and Glory is poor. John is sent away to be educated for a career in parliament. His father has great expectations for the boy. John's tendencies are away from the scenes of parliament and he becomes an Episcopalian minister of the old church. Glory, too, turns from the quietude of the rustic Isle of Man and goes to the big town of London. First she is a nurse and then an actress. She is discovered in a London music hall. She is on the downward path when Father John discovers her. The meeting is a painful one and he endeavors to pursuade her to abandon the footlights, remember their former love and join him in his work of uplifting humanity. Father Storm has been disinherited by his father and he was promised wealth and station. When John and Glory were playmates he had wealth at his command and she was of poor parents. The clergyman, with his old love renewed, attempts to win her back and his parishioners are aroused over the entanglements and trouble is in store. Glory Quayle becomes a star of the first magnitude and her manager is obliged to enlarge his theater. He seeks to condemn the land in the rear of the theater for that purpose and this happens to be the land of the church. The particular church of which Father John Storm is the officiating clergyman. This is a climax in the affairs of the two devoted lovers. The church triumphs and Glory, as the wife of John Storm, the Episcopal clergyman, gives up the stage and seeks to repay him by devoting her energies to aiding him in his great work of uplifting humanity.

In the part of John Storm Mr. Huntington will have a most difficult role, one of the most exacting he has yet portrayed here, but he promises to rise to its demands. Miss Dunbar will be the Glory Quayle in the cast and she promises to show her many friends a most delightful conception of the role and to give it an artistic presentation.

The cast of characters in the play has been carefully allotted for "The Christian" and while some of the members of the company will be seen in entirely new parts, parts in which their admirers have not been accustomed to see them, yet the management assures a smooth, even and well balanced cast thoroughly well equipped for each of the requirements "The Christian" is a play which can be witnessed by the most fastidious and the most rigid churchgoer will receive no rude shocks in the unraveling of the pulpit and the stage. Miss Dunbar has played the part of Glory Quayle more than fifty times in the larger cities and is well up in the part and will give a most creditable performance. Miss Mohrle, Mr. Nicholson, Mr. Plympton, Miss Gerard and Mr. Jones have also appeared in "The Christian." As John Storm, Wright Huntington has scored a triumph and he will give a most excellent account of himself at the head of Our Own Stock company.



Scene from the Cow Boy Girl, 1st Act, Majestic, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Daily Matinee.

THE COWBOY GIRL.

A musical melodrama is "The Cowboy Girl" that comes to the Majestic Thursday, Friday and Saturday, daily matinees. The reports are most favorable about this production and play and company are called an entertainment new in construction and thoroughly entertaining and of the different worthy sort. "Gyp" and her "Frisky Broncos" are a happy band of young ladies, good looking and talented. They dance and sing during the action of the play and form a happy relief against the more serious melodramatic part of the performance. "The Cowboy Girl" is a plausible western story well written and intelligently acted by the Kilroy & Britton company. The well known writer Lem B. Parker, is responsible for it, and to say it is a pronounced hit, original in theme and character and a production entirely different is but telling the truth. The idea of introducing a pretty chorus of show girls, enlivens the play and pleases the audience.

The Monteral Gazette of September 22, says for Flo Gear in "Marrying Mary" coming to the Majestic Oct. 29:

"Miss Florence Gear's clever acting in the part of Mary Montgomery, whose craze for collecting husbands quite justifies her title of 'Marrying Mary,' helps to make the offering at the Academy this week worth a visit. Miss Gear, who has the role formerly taken by Marie Cahill, does not slavishly copy the methods of her predecessor. Her original style and attractive personality soon established her claims to the favor of a large audience last evening. There was no lack of laughter at the grotesque complications involved by the erratic Mary's shortness of memory in the matter of marriage. When the amorous United States senator, who had lost her ten years previously on his wedding day, resolved to try his luck once more in her direction and summoned a minister to perform the marriage, it was startling to find that the minister himself had been one of the lady's former husbands. Then her fancies fastened upon a good-looking young man, but to add to the ironies of life, his elderly father, a military man, fell violently in love with her. Even when married to the man of her choice, she felt drawn at times to continue her amatory quest, and by her song of "I'm so lonely," which had hypnotic effect on susceptible males in the audience, she largely increased the list of her conquests.

"The piece abounds in bright music, and Miss Gear's various numbers were rendered last evening with taste and charm. In the part of Colonel Culpepper, Richard Karl was good, and his singing was a feature."

MR. RICE GETS "THE DEVIL."

Franz Molnar's famous comedy, "The Devil," which is the reigning sensation of the New York theatrical season, the sole version of which is held by Henry W. Savage, will be presented in this city with Henry E. Dixey and a notable cast at the Majestic Oct. 24. "The Devil" is first of all a lively entertainment and is played by the able Savage forces as a brilliant, witty comedy—permitting the lesson that the play unquestionably contains to be learned in the most agreeable way. In so presenting the piece Mr. Savage has followed explicitly the directness of the author, with whom he personally made arrangements for the presentation in this country and to whom he paid a large sum of advance royalty. "The Devil" will be presented here with all the accurate detail that made its production at the Garden theater, New York, such a noteworthy event.

RICHARD CARLE COMING.

Richard Carle is always building up his stage roles. After a long summer run in New York he has in "Mary's Lamb," which is to be the attraction at the Majestic Oct. 30, a part which shows him at his best. He plays a hen-pecked husband, and since he began appearing in the role he has added lines almost every night, until now practically every sentence he utters is the signal for a laugh. Mr. Carle, however, is not the whole show, for in "Mary's Lamb" he has the support of a lot of principals who are capable of setting him a pace, and his chorus is as showy and nimble an aggregation of girls as any manager ever collected.

At The Temple Theater

Big Vaudeville Acts, Including DeWitt Creme's Marvelous Poses Plastiques from Paris and the Clipper Comedy Four.

Mons. De Witt Creme's Poses Plastique, at the Temple Next Week.

Patrons of the Temple theater next week will have an opportunity of witnessing one of the most decided and unique novelties on the vaudeville stage in Monsieur DeWitt Creme's living art productions, who are the headline attraction of next week's bill, which opens Monday afternoon. Mons Creme and his company of carefully selected feminine and masculine artists' models from the art studios of Paris will reproduce the world's masterpieces of art, in groups and bas-reliefs, beside introducing many of his own original work. While this act is looked upon as one of the most beautiful and artistic on the vaudeville stage, it is also classed as one of the most striking and original. The elaborate stage setting, the beautiful and entrancing music and dazzling light effects, together with the works of art makes this a display of beauty never to be forgotten.

The Clipper comedy quartet will be heard in one of the most amusing musical stunts and their reputation is sufficient guarantee in itself that an act of sparkling music and funny comedy await all those attending this theater next week.

Barry and Mildred will present the side-splitting farce entitled "Reilly, the Plumber." This clever team is in great favor everywhere and it took some strong influence on the part of the local management to secure them.

George Evers, he of "Pork Chops" fame, will be heard in his irresistible monologue, which is said to be one of the brightest of the season's offerings.

Edward Winchester is a musical comedian who does things with several different kinds of instruments and does them in a musical way. He also injects some ginger in his act that makes it a popular favorite on the circuit.

Ilda Schnee, whose beautiful voice has delighted thousands of Temple patrons, will sing the latest ballad entitled "No One Knows."

The ever popular Temple motion pictures will show some highly interesting films, "The Monk's Vengeance," "Oh! What Lungs" and "Wouldn't It Tire You."

The LYRIC THEATER

Comedy and Music Make Up an Attractive Bill for Next Week, With the Prima Donna, Baroness Von Zieber, Starred—Program Varied and Strong.

BARONESS VON ZIEBER, Famous Prima Donna, at the Lyric Theater Next Week.

Comedy and music will share about equally in the various attractions which go to form a great bill the coming week at the new, pretty and already popular playhouse, the Lyric theater. To begin with is that military band prima donna soprano, Baroness Von Zieber. Wherever this great soprano has been heard she has been enthusiastically received. The press notices have been highly flattering. The baroness has an international reputation and her voice is said to be superb with a natural charm and searching quality that stamps her a singer of wonderful possibilities. Baroness Von Zieber has been called the "Melba of vaudeville" and her appearance in Fort Wayne easily ranks as one of the greatest of vaudeville attractions. The baroness sings such splendid compositions as the "Infiamatus" from "Stabat Mater" in true dramatic style.

Hennings, Lewis and Hennings will be another star feature of the bill. They have a roaring comedy sketch with musical features that is called "Mixed Drinks." It certainly sounds good.

The well known and popular comedy jugglers, Leon and Adelaine, will present new and sensational features in their act which will amuse and startle at the same time.

Another act of comedy and skill will be the comedy contortionists, the Be Anos, who have but to be seen to immediately become favorites with an audience. The new illustrated song and singer will be "Wish Me Good Luck On My Journey" by Virginia Kibbe, which will no doubt prove one of the best parts of the entertainment.

The kinodrome attraction will be "The Power of Labor."

The U. S. Pacific Fleet of over 30 battleships, cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers, is equipped with the Radio Telephone.

MARRIED WOMEN

Every woman covets a shapely figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this liniment prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend makes the danger of child-birth less, and carries her safely through this critical period. Thousands gratefully tell of the benefit and relief derived from the use of this remedy. Sold by druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Book mailed free to all expectant mothers.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and, through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

UNIQUE GAMES FOR HALLOWE'EN PARTIES

Human Tandem Races with the Men (Horses) Blindfolded Create Much Gayety.

There is no need for any one to patronize expensive florists for decorations suitable for the celebration of this ancient festival, since a trip to the woods or even a visit to the corner grocery will furnish the necessary kind of ornamentation, for branches of autumn leaves and cabbages, the latter hollowed out and suspended from chandeliers, make delightful censers for holding half a dozen candles stuck in bottles. Or the cabbages may be utilized as effective pieces for the table if filled with fruit. Pumpkins may be cut boat shape, then stored with apples, etc., and autumn leaves. Every one knows the decorative possibilities of pumpkins made into Jack o' Lanterns, with the eyes of the "Jack" covered with red silk to give an eerie effect. Corn in sheaves or on the ear furnish delightful ornamentation for rooms.

At a successful Arizona celebration held last year, the guests were received at the door by a "scarecrow man!" supported by the hall table. His face was a weird mask made from rampant streamers of leaves, and a clawlike hand, fashioned from an old white kid glove, its fingers filled with wet bran and distended at various angles, pointed to the stairway, where other large blank hands, cut from paper, designated the different rooms the guests were to enter.

In the dining room, ropes of cranberries, popcorn and scarlet peppers, sheaves of wheat, golden carrots, crimson beets, rosy cheeked apples and yellow pears formed effective and handsome decorations.

On the lawn was a camp fire, above which a big kettle was suspended from three poles. The contents of the kettle were stirred assiduously by three witches. Instead of a regular witches' "brew," the kettle contained delicious coffee, which was served by the witches.

At a New York frolic held in 1907, the drawing room walls, furniture and chandeliers were draped with light gray cheesecloth, upon which long, bony hands and skulls, cut from black paper, were pinned. A number of black kid gloves, filled with wet bran, were placed where the company would run against them, so the cold, clammy fingers would send shudders through their bodies.

Pumpkin masks, grotesquely carved and decorated with burnt cork eyebrows and paper horns that added to their demoniacal expression, were brought into relief from dark closets by candles that burned within them. Behind these masks stood shrouded forms which each guest was presented to in turn to hear the words of the oracle.

Hallowe'en Games.

As ordeals by fire are peculiarly Hallowe'en sports, an open fire in the house, whether in the fireplace, the kitchen cook stove or the cellar furnace, will serve as a center for the various charms and ceremonies.

And first, of course, comes the old spell of the nuts, which each participant, having been supplied with two nuts, names them and lays them side by side before the open fire. If these burn gently together, the augury bespeaks a happy wedded life, but if they "from each other wildly start, and with a noise forever part," the prospect is dubious for a happy wedded life.

After such tests, pass around a bundle of twigs or splinters, and let each guest light his or hers at the fire and whirl it rapidly before his face, repeating the old jingle:—"Dingle, dingle dowsie, the cat's in the well; the dogs awa' to Berwick to buy a new bell."

If the brand continues burning, emitting many sparks, there is money and good luck coming. If extinguished, there is loss of property.

Other Hallowe'en Games.

Beside all the time honored hallowe'en games, bobbing for apples, throwing apple parings over the head to see the initial letter it makes, naming apple seeds and sticking them on the eyelids to find out who sticks fastest, jumping over twelve lighted candles, one at a time, naming the months of the year as one jumps, the first candle extinguished by the draft showing the month when the jumper's wedding will take place, there are new games that add their quota to the fun.

For a contest with appropriate prizes, threading wet pumpkin seeds on a string proves a slippery undertaking. A blind tandem race, where a girl drives with red reins a blindfolded man through several rooms, returning to the starting point at the front door, makes much jollity. Three teams at a time should be started, the first one reaching the goal receiving the prize.

Finding the Name of One's Future Husband or Wife.

Having seated the guests about a large table, provide each with a saucer of water in which fifteen letters of the alphabet have been placed upside down. These may be cut from an old magazine. Now let each person blow the letters in his or her dish in a line, then take out with a pin, one by one, reverse them and spell the name of her future mate.

Supper.

Supper should be served early, as the hour before midnight must be reserved for ceremonies that can be tried at no other time. Any menu made up with nuts and apples in the ascendancy will be appropriate. The drink should be sweet cider.

Of course, there should be a dumb cake, a fate cake, or hallowe'en cake.

Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs quickly, strengthens the lungs and expels colds. Get the genuine in a yellow package. Dreier & Bros.

Quaint Favors For All Saints' Dinner Celebrations

PHOTOS BY JOEL FEDER.

The "signs of the times" make their appearance with uniform regularity, and just now we find displayed in most of the leading stores a large variety of Hallowe'en novelties. Many imported and domestic creations are shown, all of which are to be filled with bon bons, to be used for the furtherance of romance, to satisfy those who love to delve in the mysterious, for the dinner and the dance.

Among these quaint favor are pumpkin novelties of all descriptions, jack o'lanterns of all sizes, old witch mothers who live in shoes, with their numerous children; black cats, both large and small; fruit of all descriptions, such as lemons, oranges, apples, etc.; vegetable dudes, policemen, blacksmiths, cabbage men, etc.; cute little dinner favors, such as crepe paper boxes with witches' hats, brooms, pumpkins, cats, Blue Beards, and, in fact, every conceivable novelty associated with the season which tell us that for a short time elves, fairies and ghosts again inhabit the earth.

Gown With New Sheath Back.

WORN BY MISS JANE MURRAY OF HENRY W. SAVAGE, DEVIL CO.

Nobody but an artist in the sartorial line would have the temerity to attempt this model, but cut by one of the notable couturieres of Paris and worn by the right woman, the style has proved itself to be extremely graceful. A single breadth of one of the new double width satins fails in an unbroken line from the girdle hem, the seams coming at either side.

How the side gores may be shaped to give this straight back breadth sufficient fulness at the foot, while keeping it scant enough at the top, is the mysterious secret of the modiste who accomplishes this effect.

Simple Remedies for Softening and Bleaching Rough Hands

It is not as difficult to have pretty white hands as many persons imagine, for by constant and unceasing care rough or red skin can be softened and bleached, though this cannot be accomplished in a week's time. To improve neglected conditions begin the treatment by carefully cleansing the flesh of fingers, palms, etc.

It is said of a dandy of olden times the he nevor bathed his hands in water, always in olive oil. This is not sticky, as might be thought, and it is essentially cleansing. One application will remove the dirt, and a second to wash away the soiled oil. Very thorough wiping afterwards with a soft, thin linen would remove all the grease, and the skin would then be cleansed and nourished.

Few persons care to take this trouble, and such bathing is expensive, but hard water is not to be used, no matter how soiled the hands; indeed the dirtier they are the more harm it will do. Hard water does not remove dirt, but it does dry and crack the surface, so the soil is taken below the surface, rendering the skin grimy and coarse. It is said, and I think truthfully, that no woman should go away to make even a short visit without taking some powdered borax in her valise. A teaspoonful of this will soften a basinful of the hardest water and render it much better for the skin.

Glycerine is Excellent for the Hands.

Glycerine should be used for the hands, though there is a prejudice against this most valuable lotion because, it is said both to promote the growth of hair and to burn the skin. When it does the latter it is because the chemical has not been sufficiently diluted. That which is chemically pure is the only kind that should ever be used, but it always requires weakening. If the skin burns afterwards more water, or preferably rose water, must be added. The usual proportion is one-third glycerine to two-thirds of the dilutant.

Glycerine, full strength, may take the place of borax, and may be used in quite the same way, a teaspoonful of it to a pint of water. The hands are then washed as usual. Afterwards they may be wiped over with glycerine diluted, as told above, which lotion is wiped, but not washed off. This should be applied every time the hands are bathed. It is excellent for the neck and throat, though for some persons it is injurious to the complexion. There seems to be little doubt but that prolonged use of it on the face will increase the growth of superfluous hair if a person has such a tendency.

MARGARET MIXTER.

WOMAN INTERRUPTS POLITICAL SPEAKER.

A well dressed woman interrupted a political speaker recently by continually coughing. If she had taken Foley's Honey and Tar it would have cured her cough quickly and expelled the cold from her system. The genuine Foley's Honey and Tar contains no opiates and is in a yellow package. Refuse substitutes. Dreier & Bros.

HATS IN THEATERS.

In the Paris theaters in future no person will be allowed to wear a hat that obstructs the view of any member of the audience.

If any one finds that a hat worn by some one in front interferes with his or her view of the performance, and if the wearer refuses to remove it, the person making the complaint can refer the matter to one of the policemen stationed in the theater. If the complaint is well founded the officer will insist on the hat being removed, says Home Chat.

Judging by the size of the hats now being shown in the milliners' windows, some such regulations may soon be necessary in London.

A JEWELER'S EXPERIENCE.

C. R. Kluger, The Jeweler, 1096 Virginia Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "I was so weak from kidney trouble that I could hardly walk a hundred feet. Four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cleared my complexion, cured my backache and the irregularities disappeared, and I can now attend to business every day, and recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to all sufferers, as it cured me after the doctors and other remedies had failed." Dreier & Bros.

A QUIET HOUR.

"I always make it a rule to shut myself away in my own room for one hour every afternoon," writes "A Mother of Ten." "If I didn't, I really don't know how I should get on sometimes. I look on that quiet hour in the afternoon as an excellent investment, for I come down after it rested, and consequently less worried, which is good for everybody in the house—husband, children and maids. If by any chance I miss it, I find that everything goes wrong during the rest of the day and I'm dreadfully irritated and snappish."—Home Chat.

SAVED HIS BOY'S LIFE.

"My three year old boy was badly constipated, had a high fever and was in an awful condition. I gave him two doses of Foley's Orino Laxative and the next morning the fever was gone and he was entirely well. Foley's Orino Laxative saved his life." A. Wolkush, Casimer, Wis. Dreier & Bros.

Listening stand the silent forests, every leaf a soft green ear.—Heine.

Perfumes are the feelings of flowers.—Heine.

SHE SEES THE REASON.

Notices and warnings on placards do not begin to make the impression upon the public that one individual experience will. Every woman knows that in all postoffices are cards begging persons to put their names and addresses on all valuable letters, that they may be returned in case they cannot be delivered. One woman, at least, has seen and disregarded them for years, but in the future she will do differently. Last month she had occasion to send away $10 and put one bill of that denomination in an envelope, which she neither registered nor wrote on the back for return. The letter was never delivered and the woman was obliged to send another bill, this time registered. One day this week her first letter came back to her after six weeks of wandering.

She found that she had used one of her husband's business envelopes, on which was stamped his name and address, and because she had misdirected it in the first place it had come back to the name printed at the top. Thus she is in $10, and when she sends money again by mail there is no doubt that the letter will have her own name on the outside, as well as that of the addressee.

MARRIED MAN IN TROUBLE.

A married man who permits any member of the family to take anything except Foley's Honey and Tar, for coughs, colds and lung trouble, is guilty of neglect. Nothing else is as good for all pulmonary troubles. The genuine Foley's Honey and Tar contains no opiates and is in a yellow package. Dreier & Bros.

FASHIONABLE COLORS.

Copenhagen blue and all the range of Saxe blue shades are worn, and geranium hues, which suit blondes. Gray and turquoise are generally becoming to light-haired beauties. Remember that where the complexion is sallow blue next the face will only enhance the sallowness. To very fair skinned brunettes scarlet is not becoming. Where the complexion is creamy pale coral pink suits best. Olive tinted brunettes can wear dull and old rose shades.—The Queen.

ARE YOU ONLY HALF ALIVE?

People with kidney trouble are so weak and exhausted that they are only half alive. Foley's Kidney Remedy makes healthy kidneys; restores lost vitality, and weak, delicate people are restored to health. Refuse any but Foley's. Dreier & Bros.

Modish Winter Fur Pieces

Almost barbaric is the craze for fringes of fur, a style of trimming seen on some of the smartest 1908-09 fur pieces. To make this modish stole and muff many little minks were used, for each tail means an animal and one can scarcely count the brushes in the thick fringe of fur that drops form stole ends and muff.

Heads and paws as so arranged on the neck piece that they form a saucy ro wacross the chest when the garment is fastened. At the back, where the stole extends downward in a point, more brushes droop toward the waist.

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 17.—An official prediction of general rains tomorrow east of the Rocky Mountains caused weakness in the wheat market today, prices declining nearly 1c during the first hour. The market was also bearishly affected by a big increase in shipments of wheat next week from Argentine as forecasted by a well known crop statistician. The slump in prices followed a firm opening which was due to an advance at Liverpool. December opened unchanged to ⅜c higher at $1.00⅜@1.00½ and declined to 99¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 773 cars.

The market failed to rally from the early setback, sentiment in the pit being decidedly bearish all day. The low point for December was reached at 98⅞c. The close was weak with December off 1⅜@1⅝c at 99⅛@99¼c.

The corn market opened steady, but soon weakened, owing to the decline in wheat. December opened unchanged at 63¾ and sold off to 63¼c. Local receipts were 115 cars.

Part of the arly loss was regained during the last half of the day owing to the moderate demand by shorts and the market closed steady with December ⅛c lower at 63⅜c.

Selling of oats by Cash interests caused moderate weakness in the market. The weakness of wheat and corn was the chief factor in the situation. December opened ⅛c higher at 48½c and sold off to 48¼c.

Provisions were quiet and easy. Weakness of grain had a depressing effect. Prices at the start were unchanged to 10c lower.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, Oct. 17.—Opening prices of stocks today receded in sympathy with the heavy tone of the London market. A decline of a point in Union Pacific was the feature. General Electric fell 1¾, Canadian Pacific 1 and Denver & Rio Grande, and Amalgamated Copper large fractions. There were only light transactions.

There was no effective support to prices and the important stocks gradually sank until they ruled a point below yesterday's closing. The continued pressure against Union Pacific was a large influence in the general weakness.

Union Pacific declined 1¾. Reading 1½ and Baltimore & Ohio, American Sugar and Sloss-Sheffield Steel 1 point. Westinghouse Electric and Distillers Securities gained 1¼.

The market closed heavy and dull. Belated sales of some stocks made a showing of additional declines but prices generally were pulled up a fraction. Only the most languid interest was displayed in the market. Tennessee Copper advanced 1½, and North American 1⅜. Westinghouse Electric relapsed to 1½ below yesterday and St. Paul lost a point. There was some renewal of selling pressure at the last.

LOCAL MARKET EPITOME.

While not a surprise, buyers on the wholesale produce market today were amazed at the heavy receipts of chickens in view of thwe aspect the market has taken on in the past few weeks. Because of these heavy receipts, the market lowered to 7½ and 10c per pound, and then all of them were not sold. Farmers were influenced to bringing in their receipts today probably because of the warmer weather. The receipts in potatoes were also heavy and they advanced 2c per bushel for the best quality. The average stock sold for 65c, however. The whole supply was practically cleaned up today. The butter and egg markets both remained steady at 22c. The receipts in onions were not heavy, but circumstances combined to keep the market firm at 40c per bushel. Apples sold for 75c and $1.00 per bushel again, while pears went at 0c. There was considerable corn sold this morning for 55c per bushel.

Said G. H. Crouse, of the commission house of Howenstein and Crouse, this morning: "The market of next Monday will rule light, with receipts in chickens and potatoes probably the heaviest. The latter will sell at 65c and 72c per bushel, while chickens will go far 9 and 10c per pound. Apples will go for 75c. Onions and pears will remain unchanged as will also probably butter and eggs."

The retail market of today was not particularly heavy, with the receipts in chickens and potatoes again leading.

SERMON BY THE WORLD'S GREATEST CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

THE JUDGMENT

By Rev. William Ashley Sunday

(Copyright 1908 by William Ashley Sunday.)

I have a text, a part of which, at least, every man and woman in this vast audience believes in. Some one may challenge the statement and say, "I don't believe in the Bible as the Word of God;" another may say, "Neither do I believe that Jesus Christ was the Son of God;" another may say, "I believe that Death is an Eternal sleep; I don't believe in the future; I don't believe there will be a future state in which we will live in conscious retribution for our sins, or reward for our righteousness." I don't care whether you believe in the Bible as the Word of God, or in Jesus Christ as the Son of God. I don't care whether you believe in God, Christ, Heaven, Hell, the Bible, anything, anybody; I have a text, a part of which, at least, every man and woman believes in.

"It is appointed unto men once to die." You believe that, don't you? No matter whether you believe God or not; no matter whether you believe in Jesus Christ, you believe in that much of the text, Hebrews 9:27, which reads: "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the Judgment." Then, if you are willing to acknowledge the truth of the first half of that verse, why aren't you man enough to acknowledge that the last half is just as true as the first half? The same God that said, "It is appointed unto men once to die," which you acknowledge is true, said, "But after that the Judgment," which you have to acknowledge is true or else you are not a man. If God lied about the latter part He lied about the first part. God said, "It is appointed unto men to die, but after that the Judgment."

Difference in time seems to produce about the same effect upon you as difference in space. If I would say to you, "Yonder is a planet, and astronomers tell us it is hurrying toward this world, and fifty years from tonight it will crash into it," you would say, "Fifty years from tonight I won't be here," but if I would say, "Yonder is a planet headed for this world and they tell us that in fifty minutes it will crash into us," I could produce a different effect. If I should say to you tonight that your death is forty years away, it wouldn't startle you, but if I should tell you and could prove to you that it was only forty minutes away, it would produce a different effect, if you knew that in forty minutes you would be in the Judgment, rather than in forty years.

We seem startled at the very announcement of the word "Judgment." If I could prove to you that this is your last night on earth and that tomorrow morning at six o'clock you would stand before God in the Judgment, I know what you would do. You wouldn't go out of this building without settling your soul's salvation, and you would spend this night on your knees. You would call your wife and children about you; you wouldn't wait for them to beg you to be a Christian. You would be afraid to go to bed and would spend the night making the wrongs in your life right. You wouldn't sleep a wink.

If I could prove that this was your last week on earth and that next Sunday night you would be in your coffin, waiting for the funeral on Monday morning—if I could prove that, I know you wouldn't let these meetings go over your head without yielding to Jesus, and yet I will give you the platform if you can walk up and prove that this is not your last night on earth. I don't suppose it is, but you can't prove that it is not. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the Judgment."

Up in Canada there is a line of railroad. If you are going in one direction and the red light shows on the left hand side of the track, it means safety; if you are going in the other direction and the red light shows on the right hand side of the track, it means danger, but it depends altogether upon which way you are going, as to how you read the signals and what they mean. And your attitude toward God tonight may determine largely what effect or influence my message may produce. If your face is turned heavenward through Christ, let me congratulate you, but if your back is to God I pray from the depths of my soul that I may be able to say something that will startle you from your indifference and cause you to put your pride beneath your feet and walk out and publicly proclaim yourself a Christian.

I have several reasons for this subject tonight. I am not concerned about it for myself, for I have the words of Jesus. "Verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my words and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life and shall not come into Judgment." I have the words of the Apostle Paul. "There is therefore now no judgment condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit."

My heart goes out to the man or woman tonight who is held by lust, and passion and greed, and unbelief, and arrogance and self-will. Never has my heart gone out more to people than here, and never more than today. I have delivered that sermon I did this afternoon, up and down the old corn belt of Illinois. I have hitched myself to the water wagon and dragged it through the corn belt and called for the black, white, rich and poor to climb on, and thousands upon thousands have yielded to God, and hundreds of saloons went down like grass before the sickle, but I never preached it to a more appreciative crowd of men than this afternoon.

I have special reason for choosing this message tonight. FIRST, IT IS A PERSONAL QUESTION. "It is appointed unto men once to die." "Every man shall give an account of himself to God." Probably you are married to a woman that has a good deal of money, so you don't care whether you have to work or not. She has the money but she hasn't the religion for you. Her religion will never pull you through. Your mother's religion will never land you in glory. Every man must give an account of himself to God.

I presume you have those who love you well enough, if you were doomed to die, who would die for you. You are unfortunate if you can't look at one of the eighty millions in the United States and say, "He or she would die for me." I know of two—my mother or Mrs. Sunday—either or bother of whom would be glad to stand on the scaffold and die for me, but as dearly as they love me, neither could answer for me in the Judgment. I have to answer for myself and you have to answer for yourself.

You may have read it, for it was an Associate Press dispatch. A young man had spent all the money his mother could earn over the wash tub, and she finally said, "Son, I have begged, and prayed, and pleaded, and still you drink all I can earn. I wish you would go with me down to the police court and have them send you up for a few weeks or a month, until you sober up," and on Monday morning, accompanied by his mother, they appeared in the Jefferson Market police court in New York City to receive his sentence. Judge said, "Stand up and receive your sentence." He said, "Who prefers charges and what are they?" And the mother leaped to her feet, ran to her boy's side, threw her arms about him and cried, "Judge, Oh, Judge, I can't, I can't. He is my boy and I love him with all his sins," and she swooned and fell at his feet, and the post mortem examination revealed the fact that she literally died of a broken heart. As dearly as she loved that godless loafer of a bum, she could not answer for his sins in the Judgment. He would have to answer for his own. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the Judgment."

I have chosen this subject for another reason, too, with the hope that it will make some of you men and women

stop and think, who otherwise might rush on pell mell to Hell like stampeded cattle, shutting your eyes to every danger signal and semaphore of warning that God could flash across your path, stopping your ears to every sermon, rushing on, held by pleasure, and lust, and sin, and I have chosen it hoping that it may make you stop and think, and I pray God you may hear it above the tick of the clock, and I pray God you may hear it above the turmoil of business, above the laughter of your children, above the voice of your mother, or your wife. I pray God that as you go down the street, as you walk the sidewalk, your feet may resound back "The Judgment," "The Judgment," and I pray as you turn the dial on the safe to open it tomorrow morning, I pray God that as you count the money that is deposited in the bank or what the people come and pay for the commodities which they purchase, I pray God every cent you take in, every whistle you hear blow, I pray God it may flash in your face at night and by the day, "The Judgment," "The Judgment."

A friend of mine who preached in the north and lived in the south, returned home, and they said, "Mr. Zackey, the sheriff is dying. He always thought a great deal of you, and although he never allowed a preacher in his home, won't you go and see him? He might permit you to go in. Possibly you can aid him," and my friends went to his home. He stepped to the bedside of the old infidel, who was dying. He looked at him, and leaning over brushed the hair back and said, "Mr. Zackey, the doctors tell me you haven't long to live." The old sheriff's eyes seemed to flash fire, he struggled and raised himself on his elbows, then he sat upright and smiled a sickly, weak smile as he said, "Well, sir, I have walked into the cannon's mouth in twenty-six battles I have seen and faced death in all forms on the battle field, and I am not afraid to meet the enemy you call death," and he fell back on his pillow exhausted from the effort. For a moment or two my friend didn't know what to say, then he leaned over him as he panted and struggled, again brushed the hair back and said, "Mr. Zackey, how about the Judgment, sir, are you ready for that?" The old man stared at my friend and the tears trickled down his cheeks as he said, "The Judgment, I hadn't thought about that. What if it's true? What if the Bible is true? What if there is a Heaven and a Hell? I'm lost. I'm on the brink of Hell."

God pity you! I take my stand with this old Book underneath my feet for my foundation, and at my back for my authority, and I cry out, for there isn't a man here tonight that doesn't know that to have one unforgiven sin in his life means that he stands in the awful peril of God's judgment.

I have chosen it for another reason, that is I hope and pray it may make you honest and true. Most men out of Jesus Christ are not honest. I don't mean they would lie, or steal, or cheat in business, or would be impure in their life, but I mean they are not honest about spiritual things. They say, "I'm not a Christian because I don't feel like it." Religion isn't a product of the emotions: it is obedience to the command of God, whether you feel like it or not. It's not on such a trifling, childish basis as a matter of feeling. God commands all men everywhere to repent. It is a command of God. It is obedience to what the Lord tells you to do. If I had no feeling in that leg, or that arm, or side, instead of having the audacity to stand before this intelligent audience and congratulate myself upon my superior physical condition, which would be an unmistakable evidence of my deplorable state, I would summon the best doctors to my bedside. I would call every doctor in this town and say, "Hurry, I have no feeling in that leg, or that arm, or that side," and I would get a special train and go to Chicago and would summon to my bedside all the best physicians and specialists my money could hire, and I would say, "Do something, I haven't any feeling there."

If I had any desire to be a Christian, do you know what I would do? I would creep down these aisles if I thought it would create a desire to serve Jesus Christ. If you sit there with no desire to be a Christian, don't have the audacity to think you are safe; it's an unmistakable evidence of your deplorable condition. I would rather have standing room in Heaven than to own this universe.

God doesn't hold you responsible for your feelings. He holds you responsible for your will. I know there are some men, unbelievers, who are honest in their unbelief, and no one will work longer or harder than I to lead them into the light, and to help them, but I have no confidence in the man who sneers at religion and then tries to get others to disbelieve in it because he is not man enough to be a Christian. I have abhorrence and contempt for a man like that, but for the honest skeptic, God knows I would do anything to help him.

When I was secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Chicago, Bob Ingersoll came to that city to deliver a series of lectures. The first night he had a fair audience, the second night it dwindled, and the third night it dwindled still more. Where is the man that says Christianity is losing its power on the masses? Where is there an infidel on earth or in Hell that could have drawn a crowd for four weeks and packed this building to hear them sneer at religion and rail at Christianity? Nothing draws like the Gospel of Jesus Christ. H. L. Hastings was then in Chicago. He would go and hear Ingersoll lecture at night, and at noon the next day, in Farwell Hall, he would answer him. I put two yoke-fellows from the Y. M. C. A. out in front of McVicker's to give every man and woman that came out a copy of Hasting's book, "Will the old Book stand?" Ingersoll, in one of his lectures, drew one of those word pictures for which he was justly famous, at the conclusion of which the audience swayed to its feet and cheered, and their vociferations of approval rolled down the street like a simoon of the desert. He stood and said: "When I think of their God, and of their Christ, and of their Bible, and of their religion, I thank my stars I am not a Christian." Said he, "I would rather be the humblest German peasant that ever lived, wearing wooden shoes, clothed in homespun, seated by my cottage, vineclad, over which the grapes hung purple, kissed by the gentle zephyrs and turned purple by the rays of the setting sun as it died in the west, with my family about me, at peace with this world, than to be the greatest Christian that ever lived."

Up to their feet they swayed, women waved their handkerchiefs, men their hats. What was that? Simply the trick of an orator; simply a word picture, that's all. Let me paint you a picture and use the same words and see if you can read your title clear to a mansion in the skies, and see if you don't feel like leaping to your feet and cheering, as a mark of gratitude to God for the unspeakable gifts through faith in Jesus Christ, and the blessings accruing to you by your denunciation of your sin and embracing the Gospel through faith in the Son of God. When I think of what infidelity has NOT accomplished. When I think of charmed a drunkard from his cup; infidelity never won a gambler from his cards; infidelity never turned a harlot from merchandising her womanhood for gain; infidelity never built a public school, never built a university, never built, nor established, nor endowed a college; infidelity never built a church; infidelity never built a mission. Infidelity has never, in any way, linked itself to tender, elevating morals, beautiful and helpful associations, and it would not take a quire, nor a ream, nor a sheet, nor one line upon one sheet of paper to tell all that infidelity has ever done or ever will do for this old world, and well might Christianity stand tonight, as did Jesus Christ, its founder, 1900 years ago, and as she points to her works of philanthropy, her deeds of charity, her asylums for the poor, her schools and colleges and churches, well might Christianity ask of infidelity, "Many good works have I shown you from my Father; for which of these good works do you stone me?"

And I would rather be the humblest German peasant that ever lived, wearing wooden shoes, clothed in homespun, seated by my cottage, vineclad, over which the grapes hang purple, kissed by the rays of the setting sun as it dies out in the west, with my family about me, my open Bible on my knee and at peace with God through repentance and faith in Jesus Christ, and my hope of glory assured, than to be the greatest blatant, beer-soaked, sneering infidel on earth or in Hell or that ever will be on earth or in Hell.

I stand here tonight as a humble champion of Christianity, and I challenge all the combined forces of unbelief to the Judgment. In their achievements they have utterly failed to bring relief to suffering humanity or to send any hope into the great desert of doubt. Infidelity condemns Faith and applauds doing. It laughs at believing and applauds works.

Senator Bob Taylor says: "Years ago the old Columbia Theater in Chicago was thronged with youth, old age, wit, wisdom, learning, illiteracy, wealth, poverty. There stood a man, created in the image of God, his gestures were the perfection of grace, his voice was music, and he painted picture after picture of the pleasures of this life, of the joys and delights of home. He enthroned love, placed upon its brow a garland of immortelles, and he preached the Gospel of humanitarianism like an angel. Then he dipped his brush into the ink and blotted out the beautiful pictures that he had made. He stabbed love dead at his feet and he left the universe of humanity groping its way in darkness. Like a serpent of old he wriggled and wormed himself into the paradise of human hearts, where he injected his venom, beneath whose blight the flowers faded, the music died, the sun became a sack cloth of air and the moon of blood, and the universe reeled as a drunken man in the street, and there was nothing left but the graves in which he had buried hope and faith. Oh, tell me not, Oh, infidel, that there is no Heaven, no Hell, no God, no Christ!"

A murmur in my soul tells of a world to be,
As the traveler hears the billows roll before he reaches the sea;
And when every earthly hope hath fled,
And angry seas their billows fling,
How sweet to lean on what God says;
How firmly to Christ's Cross I cling.

I have chosen it because I hope it will make you true and honest.

Years ago the keeper of a draw bridge down on the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad received an order to keep the bridge closed, as a special train was due at a certain time. Shortly after that a big boat whistled for the bridge to turn and he turned it and started to swing it back and the machinery wouldn't work. He strained every nerve, like Samson of old. He heard the screech of the special. She dashed around the curve, onto the partly closed bridge, and down she went. Seventeen lives were lost. The man's reason left him, his hair turned white as snow, and they took him to the insane department of a hospital in New York City, and there he paced back and forth, until, like the prisoner of old, he wore a groove in the rocks, and ever and anon he would stop and grab the grated bars, and the only words he ever uttered were, "If I only had."

There are multitudes in Hell tonight crying, "If I only had accepted that chance, but I lost it."

I have chosen it because I hope it will make you honest and true and you will stop making these excuses for not doing God's will.

Another reason. The Judgment is a place of meeting your conscience. Conscience is that sense by which you distinguish between right and wrong, between white and black. "Oh," says a man, "I have no conscience. I'm wrong, everybody knows it and I have no concern." Had he any conscience? He had said, "No," when his conscience called until it had become seared as with an iron. Conscience called but he refused to heed it. Conscience is that which will recall to you the fact that you had the chance to do it and you wouldn't.

I believe the worm that never dies is the memory. You will remember in Heaven or you will remember in Hell.

Every county has a Recorder's office, where deeds are made out, property is transferred and all that, and if you want to know who owns property, go to the Recorder's office.

I believe God makes every man keep a record like every county keeps a record. The papers are made out and God will make you keep the record. How will He do it unless through your memory?

Lord Bacon said, "The human intellect never forgets a thing." At some time in your life all you ever knew or heard will return to you.

King Cyrus could call by name 25,000 men in his army.

They say of James G. Blaine that he seldom forgot a name or a face.

They say Roosevelt has a marvelous memory.

Moody says he met a Schotchman in Glasgow that could repeat the Bible from Genesis to Revelation.

I met a Japanese student in the Armour Institute in Chicago that could repeat from memory the first five books of the Old Testament, the Psalms and every book in the New Testament, word for word.

They say Horace Greely could repeat, word for word, column after column of the New York Tribune, and Dr. Buckley can repeat from memory, column after column of the Christian Advocate.

Some men have marvelous memories, others forget easily, but when you stand before God and He touches the secret spring of memory, memory will do its work.

Some men have the record of their lives written before they die. You can spare yourself that trouble and expense, for God is writing a record of your life and it's no work of fiction. God puts in every dirty thing you do. He leaves nothing out. Did you swear today? It went down in the book. Did you lie? It went down. Did you commit adultery? It went down. Did you sneer at God? It went down. Don't flatter yourself that you will never meet it. Don't flatter yourself because you weren't caught in that lie or nobody knew you committed adultery that you will not meet it. You will stand before God and God will touch the secret spring of your memory and you will recall that you did it. It will all come back. There are thousands of people who would cut off their right arm or gouge out their right eye if they could only undo the record, if they could only undo the past. They would give anything in the world if they could only awaken some morning and find it all a dream. God pity you!

Some men plunge into pleasure and try to drown their conscience by drinking. Conscience is calling them to a better life. I know of men in this town that God is calling to a better life and they are troubled. They are afraid to come to this building. Great, big, strong stalwart men are whimpering, simpering cowards, afraid to come here for fear they will have to stop drinking. God pity them! They are troubled. They plunge into dissipation to drown the memory of the fact that their conscience is rebuking them and calling them to repentance.

Once I was at the point of death from drowning. I went up and down four times, and all I had ever done seemed to flash through my mind. It's marvelous how the deeds of a life time can seemingly rush through your mind in a few seconds.

Cain has been dead and in Hell for 6,000 years, but tonight he remembers that he killed his brother Abel. He knows the place he did it, he knows what he did it with, whether a rock or a club.

Pilate has been in Hell for 2,000 years, but he will never forget that he had Jesus on his hands and had a chance to accept Him, but he turned Him down. He will never forget that.

Cleopatra, the flat-nosed enchantress and high priestess of sensuality will never forget.

Julius Caesar will never forget, no sir.

You will meet your record. A man without a record is a monstrosity. Your record is as much a part of you as your name.

I used to go down south to play ball, and colored quartettes would come in front of the hotel to sing, and I remember one song I loved. The chorus goes:

My God hears all I say,
My God sees all I do,
And He's writing all the time.

And down your deeds go in His Book. You will meet your record. You will meet your sins.

My friend, Mr. Crittenden, who goes up and down the country preaching and establishing homes for fallen girls, was out in San Francisco working and preaching with that object in view, and one day he received a letter, opened it and read it, and it read:

"My dear Mr. Crittenden: I have been to hear you preach every night you have been here, but there is no hope for me and I am not writing this asking for help or for hope, but simply to tell you what sin does, that you might use it to warn others. I was not always thus. I am a college graduate. I married a sweet, beautiful girl. God sent three children into our home. I loved my wife, she loved me, and one day there came one into my home, and she tempted me and I tempted her and we sinned. I left my wife and I abandoned my children. My wife is dead, broken-hearted; my children are in an asylum. For a time I supported this woman, then I got so low and debased that I lived on the product of her infamous shame. One night I sat leaning over a greasy card table down in an underground groggery, listening to the ribaldry and jests of the blasphemous characters and incarnate friends of either sex that assembled there and made that cess pool for Hell their hibernating place, when a man came down and shook me and put a note on the table, and it read, "Hurry home quick, Lizzie is dying." That was her name. I picked up my hat and hurried out and down the street as fast as my drunken steps would carry me. I turned into a dark, festering alley, staggered and reeled up a rickety stairway into a dark, dingy room, where the only heat, light and air came through a transom, and there on a bundle of rags and straw lay a woman, dying in her own excrement, and at the sound of my voice and footsteps she aroused herself, sat upright, looked me in the face and hissed between her teeth like a serpent. She pointed her finger in my face and cried, "God curse and damn you; I'm your victim. You have abandoned me. God curse and damn you; I'm your victim. This is your work. Look on it, sir," and she fell back, gasped, her muscles relaxed, and she was gone."

That man will stand before Jesus Christ and meet his sin and the victim, and so will you. Don't flatter yourself that you can hide it. You will meet it. You will meet it. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the Judgment."

Who will be there? Principalities, power, the quick and the dead. Listen to the noise shaking the primitive elements! See the lightning leap from the angry depths of gloom! Hey! Listen to the bitter cry of the smouldering segments! Can your wealth shield you now? Come on, come on, children of ungodliness, outcasts for eternity. It's your farewell gaze upon the fast receding drama. Come on! Come on! No star floats in the lurid sky to tell of hope or cheer your heart. Stand up! Stand up! Haughty high priest of erring science and sponsor of the bastard theory of evolution! Come on, you miserable philosopher! Come on, you old railing higher critic theologian! Blasphemous scoffer! Let the grinning skeletons of misopportunity lean against the tombstones upon which are chiseled the epitaphs of your foolhardiness. Tell the world what a fool you were. Hey, old skeptic, it's your final trial of unbelief. And will you laugh at the thunder peals of God and the lightning flashes, and make fun as you did of the Gospel when preached and sung to you? Come on, you prayerless buffon! Stand up and tell the world what a fool you were to lead a prayerless life. You that magnified humanity and kicked the Bible out, stand up and tell the world what a fool you were! Worshipper of mammon, idolators of gain. You had no Bible but your ledger and day book. Go down to your safe deposit vault. Make me power of attorney. I will bring your books to you and you can fondle your stocks and bonds. Come on! You made a fool out of the gold. Come on and tell the world what a fool you were to live and pile up a little money!

"It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the Judgement."

God offers a way of escape and He offers it now. If you violate the law, there is one of three ways you can escape. First: You are charged with the crime and summoned before the Judge. The evidence is heard and the Judge says, "The prisoner is discharged." THAT IS BY FORCE OF LAW. There is nothing in your act that makes you a criminal. The law doesn't cover that act; the law doesn't specify that you shall not do that, hence you are not a criminal. But supposing you are charged with a crime and you plead "Not guilty." You put the county to the expense of summoning a jury, and the jury finds the defendant not guilty. You escape by force of testimony or evidence. But supposing you are charged with a crime, you put the county to the expense of summoning a jury, hire your lawyer, plead "Not guilty," stand up and defend yourself, but the jury finds the defendant guilty of the crime charged in the indictment and you are sentenced. How can you escape? One way, by a pardon. Who can give that? The Governor.

We have all had our trial. God has heard the evidence. He has passed sentence. It is eternal damnation. Now, how are you going to escape? There is just one way and that is to be pardoned, and there is only one in all the universe that can do it, and that is God, and He can do it only on one ground, that you repent and accept Jesus Christ as your Saviour. If you don't, you are damned, as sure as you breathe. But accept Him and God will pardon you.

During the war, the case of the Confederate States of America against Edward Cooper was called. He was charged with desertion. The evidence was heard, he was allowed to testify for himself, of course, and he said: General, I am guilty. It was this way: I received a letter from my wife saying that she and my little girl, Lucy, were ill. And, sir, I tried to secure a furlough but they refused me, and when on picket guard or lying in my tent I could see the white face of my sick child and my wife, and they seemed to call me. I got a letter from my wife. She said, "Edward, get a furlough and hurry home; we must see you, we are so sick," and, General, they wouldn't let me go, so one night when on picket duty I threw down my gun and went home, and when my wife saw me she staggered to the gate, threw her arms around me and said, "Oh, Edward, I'm so glad you have come. How long can you stay? How long is your furlough?" and I said I didn't get a furlough; I ran away. She withdrew her arms and looked at me as though she was ashamed. She said, "Edward, go back; the name of Cooper has never been disgraced, there is not a stain on it. Go back and never mind if Lucy and I die. Never mind, it will only be for a little while that we will be separated. Go back." And he said, "General, I am here, not that you brought me by force, but because Mary told me to come. And, Sir General Battle, I would have gone home to Mary and my baby if all the guns in the Confederacy were pointed at my heart." But the men who sat on the court-martial were trained to do their duty though the heavens fell. The tears fell, but they brought in the verdict "guilty," and he was sentenced to be shot. Robert E. Lee reviewed the evidence and wrote on the bottom of it: "The finding of the court-martial is approved, but Edward Cooper is discharged. Robert E. Lee."

God has heard your case. He says, "Damnation." That is just. Twenty years ago I called on God. He said, "It is just, you ought to go to Hell, Bill, but you have accepted of Jesus Christ as your Saviour and I can't send you."

"It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the Judgment." There is just one way to escape, and that is to be pardoned by faith in Jesus Christ.

My friend, Frank Smith, was a prisoner in Andersonville. I wonder if there is any old soldier here that was in Andersonville? If there is, stand up, I'd like to look at you. My friend Frank Smith, was captured and taken to Andersonville, and while there, there was an exchange of prisoners, and Frank received a little piece of yellow card board with the number fifty-six on it. That was his exchange number. The soldiers there were dying 100 and 150 a day. The hot, pitiless sun beat down on them. Through one corner of the stockade there ran a little creek and from that they got their drinking water, and into that they cast their excrement and sewerage and filth. They were crying, "Water, water, water." One day, a few feet inside of the dead line, there burst through the dry, hard, parched earth a spring. It shot up in the air and curled over like an umbrella. The confederate officer in charge said, "If God answers the prayers of the damned yankees, I will give them boards." He gave them boards and they built troughs and made hog wallows in which the men would lie, and they made troughs for drinking water. That spring flows tonight, and the Andersonville prison association has built around the spring a retaining wall, and from that day to this it has never stopped flowing. That was God's answer to the boys in blue who cried, "Water, water."

My friend, Frank Smith, received his exchange with the number fifty-six on it. In Frank's company was a man who was an infidel. Frank's friends, the soldiers, came and gave him messages which they had scribbled to send to their wives, and his friend, the infidel, picked up a piece of brown paper, scribbled on it a few words of endearment to his wife and children, and then added some verbal messages and said, "Tell them I'm hoping against hope. I'm so weak I can hardly stand. I never expect to see them again." He said, "Frank, I never begrudged a man good luck or good fortune before. I don't begrudge you, but I only wish I was going too."

They ordered those with the exchanges to fall in line, and Frank started with his friend by his side, talking to him, when Frank slipped him his cardboard and said, "Jim, you take this and go and I'll stay, and when they call the roll out there you answer "Frank Smith," and when they call it in here, "I'll answer for you. Go, will you?"

He said "Frank, I won't do it."

Frank said, "You go, Jim. My father, my mother, my brothers and sisters are dead and I haven't a relative in the world. Nobody would miss me if I would die, but if you would die, up in Ohio there is a wife and three little children. She would be a widow and they would be orphans. Jim, you go and I'll stay."

He took the cardboard, the tears rolled down his cheeks, he kissed Frank's hand, and Frank said, "That's just exactly what Jesus Christ did for you, Jim. We were condemned and He came and took our place and said, "You go free."

Now, when my name is called up in Heaven I'll not be afraid. When God calls my name—W. A. Sunday—I'll walk up, and just as I do, Jesus will rise and say, "Father, I stand for him. He preached my Gospel, he accepted the atonement I provided. I stand for Him." Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

Hear me! God will call some of you by name and you will look and be speechless, for Jesus Christ will keep His Seat. You never had manhood or womanhood enough to be a Christian. You didn't walk out for Jesus and you will hear the saddest words that ever fell on ears, "Depart, I never knew you."

"It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the Judgment." God offers you the way of escape. Will you take it?

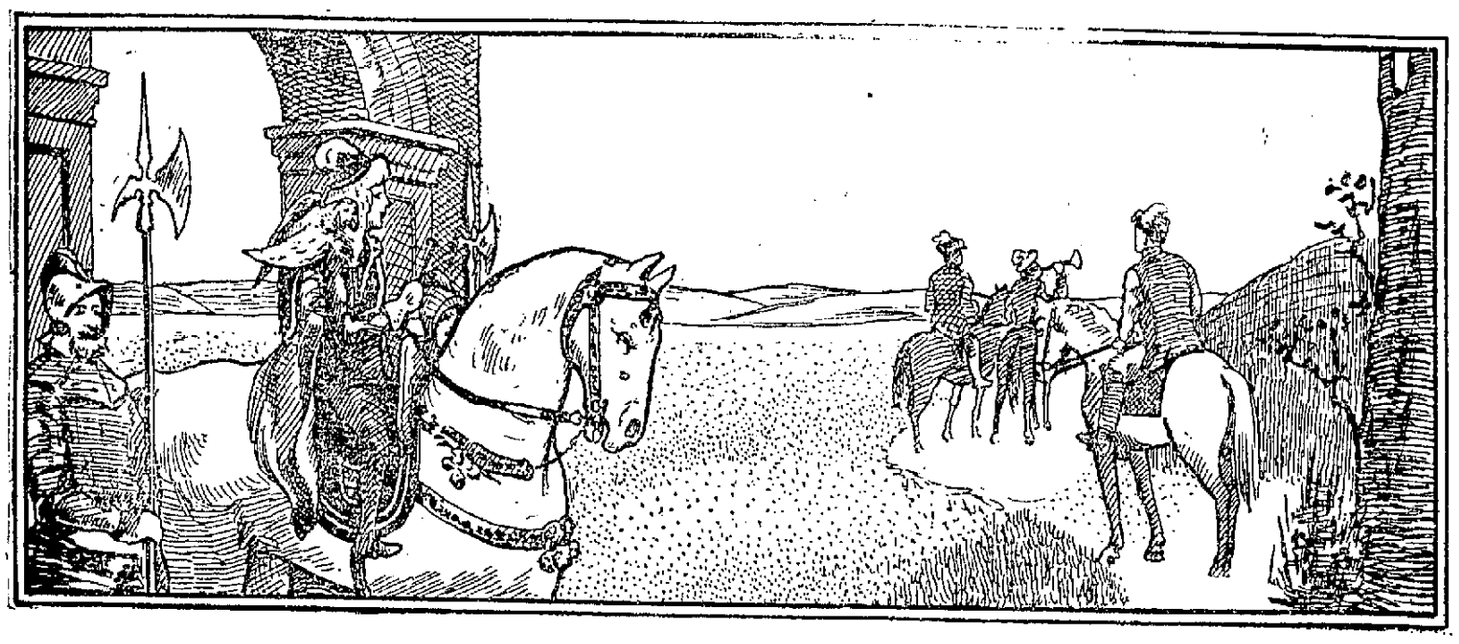
FOR EVERY BOY AND GIRL

THE UNLUCKY PARROT

BY RUTH HUNTINGTON SESSIONS.

ONCE upon a time, in a far Eastern country, there lived a young prince. He was good-natured, gentle, and so fon' of the people, his father's subjects, that his favorite amusement was to wander about the imperial city disguised as an ordinary boy, and make acquaintance with all kinds and conditions of workers, often helping them and sharing their toil. It was the custom of the country that all members of the royal family should be saluted when seen in public; so you may imagine that the prince was very glad to be able to do away with this ceremony by going about "incognito," as it is called, and being treated a little more informally than when in company of his suite.



THE PARROT LIGHTED UPON HIS SHOULDER

One day, while disguised in plain clothes, as he was passing through a dark, narrow street, lined on each side with booths and dens of merchants, he heard the sound of a voice calling:

"Come in! Come in!"

At first, peering into the dark interior of the small shop before the door of which he had paused, he could see nothing, and was at a loss to find out whence the voice came. But presently, in a cage just inside the door, he spied a parrot, a most beautiful bird, with plumage of red, green, and yellow. Now, of all things, the prince had always wished to possess a parrot. He stepped inside the shop filled as it was with all kinds of curious lamps, jugs, and spicy-smelling Oriental stuffs, and at the very back of it saw a little old man, dark and crafty-looking, whose long beard almost touched the ground.

"Is your bird for sale?" asked the prince, politely, of the shopkeeper.

Now the old man was quite well aware that a member of the royal household stood before him, but he was too cunning to let the prince know it; so he answered as if he were talking to an ordinary purchaser:

"Yes, it is for sale, but only at one price. I will not part with it for money, as I value it too highly."

"How can I purchase it, then?" inquired the prince.

The old man hesitated a moment, then he said:

"Bring me a cup of water from the spring that flows by the image in the palace garden. Then you shall have the parrot. But you must say nothing to any one. The bargain must be kept a secret between you and me."

The prince did not know (what to the clever old man had long been the subject of his plots and schemes) that a cup of water, given to anybody from this spring by the hand of a prince of the royal blood would render the drinker able to use fairy power and endow any animal with it. This fact had never been told to the boy, because it was so entirely contrary to the rules of the court that he should perform any service whatever for a person outside of his own family. But in mixing with the common people, and seeing their many ways of helping one another, he had forgotten this regulation. So it seemed quite a natural thing for him to run home at once, fetch a silver cup, and from the bubbling spring which, surmounted by a stately image, flowed in a corner of the beautiful garden of his father's palace, to fill it with water, and return at once to the dingy shop where the owner of the parrot awaited him.

"Come in! Come in!" shouted the bird again, and the prince held out his cup to the little old man, who eagerly clutched it and immediately drank its contents.

"You shall have the parrot now," he said, with a crafty smile; "but first let me get it ready to go with you."

He took the parrot down and carried it into the back of the shop, stroked its feathers several times, and whispered a few words in its ear which the prince supposed to be a tender farewell. Then he handed it to the boy, who ran off delighted with his prize, and unconscious that he was carrying with him the servant of a dangerous sorcerer, who was only waiting for a chance to work some injury upon him. The parrot was not shut up in a cage, like other pets, but was set on a golden perch, and was daintily fed: and soon the bird amused every one in the palace by its speeches.

Two or three days after this the prince was invited to go out hunting with his father, the king. Just as he was mounting his horse at the palace door, the parrot flew from its perch and lighted upon his shoulder.

"Take the bird away," he called to a servant. "I shall be gone all day, and cannot take care of it."

The servant sprang to remove it; but each time he did so, the creature flew back and took its stand once more on the shoulder of the prince. The king was impatient to be off, so, at last, finding it difficult to be rid of his pet, the prince allowed it to remain where it was, and they started, the sharp claws of the bird clinging to the boy's hunting-costume. For a while all went smoothly; but finally they came into a dark wood, where it was necessary to ride carefully over a rough road, in single file. The prince was behind the rest of the party, bending his head now and then, as did those in front of him, to escape the hanging boughs of trees which obstructed the path. Suddenly the parrot, with a shrill scream, flew directly down upon the top of the horse's head, and dug its sharp beak into the animal's flesh. The horse tossed its head in annoyance, stumbled and threw the rider, blinded as he was by the boughs, to the ground; then, as the parrot let go, escaped with a wild snort, and broke away into the thicket, thus leaving the prince on his back alone, the rest of the hunting-party being already out of sight, and the bird, which had now seated itself upon the nearest tree, looking down at him with an evil leer.

The prince shouted and called and whistled, but in vain, for only an echo answered him. Then he sat up, looked about him, and considered how he could best find his way back to his home or catch up with his father. The path before and behind him seemed to have disappeared. There was not even an opening among the trees to guide him to an outlet from the bewildering mass of green which surrounded him on all sides. The parrot had succeeded in the plot imparted to it by the old man, and had led the poor prince into a complete trap, from which it appeared impossible to escape. But the wood was full, fortunately, of friendly little animals who were on excellent terms with the wood-fairies, and ready to join with the latter in helping mortals out of the toils of a sorcerer when necessary. So the prince, staring in a discouraged way at the dense thicket about him, presently noticed a big bee, which buzzed round and round his head in a mild, not at all alarming, fashion, and, without touching him, seemed to have some reason for keeping near him. Pretty soon it flew a little way off, then back again; then, perching on a leaf, looked at him with an expression which, for an insect, was truly remarkable. The prince then began to notice that the parrot was making extraordinary efforts to catch this bee, but that the latter managed to fly away each time it came near, and always returned to its post near him.

"What do you want of me, I wonder?" he said to himself. The bee buzzed again, and this time the prince followed it as it flew off, till it lighted on a thick vine which twined itself back and forth across a couple of tall trees. On examining this vine, he found it had grown exactly in the form of a ladder, upon which, if he liked, he could climb upward.

"Ah!" he exclaimed. "Now I can ascend high enough, perhaps, to see over the tree-tops and get an idea how to find my way out of this place." So, unheeding the shrill cries of the parrot, which followed him, pecking angrily at the leaves as it hopped from twig to twig, he scrambled eagerly up the long vine ladder.

It was a very long climb, and at the top he found himself at the end of a long corridor, with a floor of interlaced twigs, where the vine had grown across between the tree-tops and interwoven itself firmly, and with walls of thick green. Passing down this corridor, he came to a tiny house of the same materials. And within the house, on a throne of pine cones, sat a little old woman.

The prince, who never failed to show his good manners, made a low bow.

"Who are you, pray tell?" inquired the old woman.

He told her how he had been lost in the woods, and she shook her head with a frown.

"The work of some sorcerer," she muttered; "very likely that parrot there." At which the bird ruffled up all its feathers and gave a more piercing scream than ever. "And I am the old woman who looks after the forest. I know all the animals and insects and birds, and my business is to see that they keep it in order. I can't go with you to show you the way out, but I'll help you as much as I can. In the first place, you'll have to do something to that bird, for it is bound to bring you ill luck. You 'll never get anywhere till you break its power. And that can be done by touching it with a leaf from the magic palm by the three wells. Do you see the tree just beyond the edge of this forest?"

She pointed with one finger out of the window of the hut, and in the distance the prince could see the top of a palm-tree.

"That is it," explained the old woman. "Get to it, climb up and pluck a leaf, rub your evil-eyed parrot with it, and there will be an end of the power that is keeping you shut in this wood. Once free from it, you 'll find the path easily enough. Now climb down the ladder again, and at the bottom you 'll find a guide who can show you the way to the palm: but keep your wits about you, for that bird of yours will stir up more trouble if it can."

The prince thanked her heartily, and in a moment was scrambling down the ladder again, wondering what kind of a guide the old woman had provided for him. He did not hear her give any orders, but on reaching the ground, he saw a little rabbit, sitting up on its haunches and looking at him with a most intelligent air, while round its neck was slung a small silver whistle. The prince made no doubt that this was to be his companion, particularly as the parrot was becoming excited once more; so he made a low bow to the rabbit, and requested him to lead the way toward the magic palm at the three wells.

The rabbit hopped gleefully along in front, and the prince was following, thinking the road quite smooth and comfortable, when suddenly the parrot, which had been flying ahead of them, lighted upon a stone and flapped its wings, at the same time giving a cry. Immediately there was a sound of rushing water, and the next moment a roaring stream dashed across his path, cutting him off completely from further progress, since it was too deep for wading and too turbulent for swimming. The parrot, meanwhile, had managed to fly safely to the other side, and sat on a stone, screaming:

"Get over, if you can! Get over, if you can!"

The prince looked about him for bridge or boat, but saw none. The rabbit, however, lost no time in putting the little silver whistle to its mouth. It blew a shrill blast, then listened. A burrowing and scratching sounded in the underbrush, and in a few moments an army of beavers, moving with the precision of a regiment, appeared. The prince watched them.

"I believe they are going to build a dam," he said to himself; and, to be sure, this was the case. The clever little animals did not stop until a regular beaver-dam was finished, on which the rabbit and the prince crossed safely. The parrot glared at them in a revengeful manner, but made no more noise, and the three proceeded for nearly a mile, when suddenly a weird laugh from the bird made the prince start and look upward. There in front of them was a frowning precipice of gray rock, seeming almost to touch the sky, and without a foothold on its surface.

The prince glanced at the rabbit, who was again equal to the occasion. Setting the whistle to its lips once more, it blew two blasts this time, and looked up along the face of the cliff. Presently some queer little figures appeared, slowly crawling downward, and as they drew nearer they turned out to be monkeys, who were hanging by one another's tails and thus making a sort of rope. When they had brought it within a few feet of the prince, the lowest one waved its tail, and the rabbit, giving a jump, landed on its back. Then followed the boy; and lastly the parrot, which contented itself with administering vicious pecks to the poor apes as it flew alongside of them up the cliff.

Now came a long climb down on the other side of the precipice, and then the palm-tree began to seem quite near, and the prince could make out the three wells underneath its shade. But just as he was congratulating himself on this welcome sight he heard the parrot call out: "Good-by; there you go!"

At the same instant he felt himself begin to sink. Down, down, down he went, into a mass of soft sand, which in a moment was up to his neck, and threatened to cover him altogether. But the friendly rabbit had noticed it, and had blown three loud whistles, at which there was an instant sound of scratching and tearing and rushing. Up from the ground, where they had lived in holes, out of the underbrush, and down the hill behind came a hundred little foxes with bushy tails. They rushed up to the sand-hill which was swallowing the poor prince, and began to scratch, scratch with their small paws, and in a "jiffy" they had set him free by pulling the sand away so that he could scramble out. He shook the dirt off and tramped on, now seeing the magic palm-tree very near, and in a few minutes he stood beneath it. But alas! what a discouraging sight confronted him! It was a magic palm-tree indeed, for in an instant it shot up to a great height before his astonished eyes. The tree grew enormously tall, and its leaves were at the very top; and between him and them was the slippery trunk, up which, try as he would, he could not climb, since there was not the least hold for hand or foot. Gradually it shrank again until the leaves were only a few feet above his head, but at the first motion he made to reach up for one, or to climb the tree, it suddenly lengthened itself to a great height again.

"Ha, ha!" screamed the parrot, perched in the tree's branches. "Not so easy, my friend!"

"You wretched bird!" the prince cried angrily. "I will find some way yet." Then he turned to the rabbit once more, feeling sure it would help him out of his difficulty. There was quite a little group of animals by this time, as a few of the beavers, monkeys, and foxes had followed along out of curiosity, and were standing in a semicircle, looking up at the tree. The little rabbit seemed to have a sudden idea. It drew out its whistle, and sounded four blasts from the silver mouth. There was no noise in answer to this, but, quick as a flash, a little red squirrel came running into the middle of the group. It ran up to the rabbit, and the two rubbed their noses together in friendly fashion, the squirrel evidently receiving its orders. Then the parrot, seeing what it was about to do, made a rush at it, and opened its beak as if to seize it by the tail; but the swift creature was too quick. In an instant it had sprung away, up the tree, and in another it was back, holding in its mouth a great leaf of the palm.

"Now I have you!" cried the prince to the parrot, taking the leaf in his hand and making a jump after it; but the wicked bird only flew a short distance away to the branch of a tree, where it perched, laughing wickedly.

"Why don't you catch me?" it cried.

The prince, after a few more attempts, realized that it was of no use to try this sort of game, for the bird escaped him as often as he chased it. The animals were looking on with much interest; but, to the dismay of the wanderer, who was depending upon their protection, they seemed to have nothing to suggest. Even the rabbit was silent and inactive, and did not make any attempt to clear up the difficulty. But just as the prince began to be discouraged and to think help was never coming, a bird with red wings flew down near him. It had such a look of understanding that the prince ventured to address it in his own language: "Could n't you take a message," he said, "to the old woman of the woods?" I 'm sure she could tell me what to do. Please ask her to send me a word of advice."

The bird spread its wings obediently and flew off, and the animals all nodded their heads sagaciously, as if they approved of this. In a few moments a flapping was heard above them; and a great eagle, carrying something on its back, began to descend, and this something, as it drew nearer, was discovered to be the little old woman herself.

"You had no business to send for me," she remarked rather sharply to the prince," but I 'll consent to help you out of your trouble just once, for the sake of getting rid of that nuisance of a parrot. Now listen." And she whispered in the prince's ear: "The only way to make it impossible for that bird to get away is to paralyze him by drawing a circle round him."

"But what shall I do it with?" the boy inquired. "I have not even a piece of chalk nor string. Besides, if it sees me trying any such thing, it is sure to fly away at once, before I finish."

The old woman would not say anything more.

"I shall not make any further suggestions," she declared. "All I can do is to tell you what is necessary. The animals must help you out." And with this she climbed on the back of the eagle once more, and rode away.

The prince was determined to make the rabbit bestir itself, as he began to grow impatient after his chase of the parrot. He went up and seized the little creature by its long ears, giving it a mild shake. Now came about a most curious thing. The head of the rabbit, ears, eyes, nose, mouth, and all, and its neck, slipped out of its body like the heads of the Easter rabbits made of plaster which are bought in the confectionery stores. From the hole that was left came forth a small head and face then the rest of the body dropped away, and there stood a tiny man, smiling.

"You have set me free," he declared. "I am a fairy prince, who for disobedience to the king of the fairies was condemned to take the form of a rabbit until some human being should shake me out of it. I have power over the animals, and now that your touch has given me command of speech again, we will consult how to get you out of this trouble. In the first place, we have to draw the circle round the parrot without its seeing what we are about. This will have to be managed very carefully, but I think the animals and insects can help us there. Wait and you shall see." And, picking up the whistle as it lay on the ground beside the rabbit-skin, he blew very softly on it.

The animals all crowded round him closely, and, to his joy, the prince found he could understand the little man as he spoke to them.

"Now," he said, "find me a snake and a spider. You," turning to the prince, "must engage the parrot in conversation."

This was not very difficult to do, as the bird was so ready with its saucy answers that the prince could easily keep it talking to him and mocking him by pretending to coax it nearer. Meanwhile the snake and the spider arrived, and received their instructions from the fairy. The spider seated herself on the end of the snake's writhing tail, and as he crawled along unseen through the grass, she spun her web and threw it out behind them, thus drawing a delicate but very firm line round the tree where the sorcerer-bird sat. Suddenly they saw it puff out its feathers and draw up its eyelids as if ill; then, with a cry, it settled down on its perch; and as the prince crept up and gently laid the leaf across its back, the malignant sparkle died out of its eyes. Its magic power was gone.

The animals began leaping about in great joy; but just at this moment a hunter's horn sounded, and not far away. In an instant they were scattering in all directions. The foxes darted into their holes; the beavers made for a stream near by; the squirrel disappeared in the top of the nearest tree; the monkeys, with a chatter, swung themselves out of sight amid the green branches; the snake and the spider hid themselves securely in the grass. "Good-by, comrade" called the fairy prince as he, too, vanished; and the mortal prince, glancing down a sunlit path before him, saw his father's hunting-party approaching, the king riding ahead with an anxious face. The meeting betwen father and son was most joyful, and of course many explanations followed. Now that the parrot was reduced to a harmless bird once more there seemed no reason for not keeping it, though the prince resolved to put it securely into a cage on his return home.

The next question was how the wicked old man could be despoiled of his power as a sorcerer and worker of mischief. He had already, with his magic instinct, discovered the fact that the parrot could no longer be his slave, and was therefore planning some way to prevent the vengeance which he knew the king would execute upon him. But just before leaving the wood, the prince discovered that the fairy had dropped the whistle in its hurried departure. He picked it up and put it in his pocket, feeling sure that it would lead to an opportunity of seeing his little friend again; and that night, after returning to the palace, he determined to try what could be done with it. So, after nightfall, he slipped out into the moonlit garden by the spring, and blew it gently. In an instant the small man stood before him.

"Can you tell me," the prince asked, when they had greeted each other, "how we can prevent the old man who conferred that evil power on the parrot from doing any more such mischief?"

"I can," said the fairy. "All you need is to touch him, also, with a leaf from the magic palm. To-night, while all are asleep in the palace, I will send one of the wood-fairies, in the form of a bird, to drop one here by the spring. You will find it in the morning. Now give me my whistle, for I must not leave it in the hands of a mortal. Farewell!" And he melted into the moonlight before the prince's astonished gaze.

The next morning there lay a large green leaf beside the spring. The prince carried it to his father, who sent a guard of soldiers from the palace to overpower the old man and touch him with it; and then, despoiled of his wicked faculties, he was brought before the king. He begged so hard to be allowed to return to his shop that the request was granted; but ever after a watch was kept on him, and the young prince, after his severe lesson, never allowed himself to be persuaded again to give water from the magic well to any of his father's subjects.

And what became of the unlucky parrot? It remained a very sulky bird, always mourning, apparently, over its lost gift; but as parrots are said to have extraordinary long lives, and its death has never been announced, it may, to this very day, be a pet of some one of the prince's descendants. Who knows?

PETRIUS, Deitric, and little Jan
Were all the sons of a stout Dutch Van.
Annetje, Tryntje, and Betticoo,
These were all his daughters, too.
In the happy month of May
Forth they wander, blythe and gay,
Through the groves and meadows flowery,
Till they reach the famous Bouerie.
There each little man and woman
Gathers the sweet "pinksterblumen."
Cheeks like roses from their walk,
In their arms the fragrant stalk;
In their gowns a "winklehawk."*
Home they hasten in the gloaming,
Where the vrouw waits their coming,
Tucks them in their trundle-beds,
Crooning soft above their heads:

"Trip a trop a tronjes,
De varkens in de boonjes,
De koojes in de klaver,
De paardeen in de haver,
De eenjes in de waterplass,
So groot mijn kleine Joris wass!"
